Premier Says Power of Senate of Canada to Be Limited

OLIVER TO REMAIN AT HEAD OF GOVERNMENT; TO FIND SEAT FOR HIM

Colleagues in Cabinet Unanimous in Demanding That Premier Retain Office; Leader Agrees to Carry On; Constituency to Be Chosen Later From Among Several Offers; Nelson Most Mentioned; Interior Demands That Premier Remain, Member for Kamloops Asserts

Hon. John Oliver will remain at the head of British Columbia's Government, and in due course a constituency will be found for him. This became absolutely clear to-day after the Cabinet, at a lengthy meeting this morning, had assured the Premier that it was solidly behind him and after Mr. Oliver himself had made known that he would not resign.

Pressed for an announcement, the Premier, who has remained absolutely silent since the election, pointed out that a number of elected Liberal members had offered to resign and allow him to run in their constituencies, and he intimated that he proposed to accept one of these offers.

"I expect to remain in my present position and that a constituency will be found for me," he remarked. This was the first actual intimation of the Premier's plans.

When Mr. Oliver was asked whether it was true that he intended to resign, he observed that it was far too early now to discuss the question of a constituency in which he could run. Official papers announcing the results of the election had not been received yet, he said, and he intimated that he was in no particular hurry to make a decision.

Cabinet Ministers declared emphatically after to-day's meeting of the Executive Council that they were unanimously behind the Premier. No arrangements had been made yet for providing their chief with a seat, they said, but there was no question about him remaining in office, they asserted. There would be no trouble about the Premier being elected, they affirmed.

CAMPBELL HERE
The fact that Kenneth Campbell, Liberal member-elect for Nelson, is now in Victoria has led to the assumption in many quarters that Mr. Oliver will be a candidate in Nelson. Mr. Campbell, however, has declined to discuss the situation. It is taken for granted that he has discussed the whole matter with Mr. Oliver. Reports from Nelson indicate that the Premier would have no difficulty in carrying that constituency.

Meanwhile the strongest kind of influence is being brought to bear upon the Premier from all sides to remain in office.

INTERIOR BACKS OLIVER
The Interior is solid in its demand that Mr. Oliver remain at the head of the Government, according to Mayor J. R. Colley of Kamloops, Liberal member-elect for the interior city, who reached here to-day to ask the Premier not to think of retiring at this time.

Census Bureau Says Seventy-Nine Are Above 100,000 Population Mark

New York Over 6,000,000; Detroit Home of More Than 1,000,000

Washington, July 19.—Eleven cities of the United States have grown into the 100,000 population class during the last year. Estimates of population of the principal cities of the country as at July 1 of this year show there are seventy-nine having 100,000 or more, as compared with sixty-eight last year.

The Census Bureau, in preparing the estimates, did not calculate the population of some of the rapidly growing cities, such as Detroit, Los Angeles, Seattle, Denver, Akron, Bridgeport, Houston and Spokane. The population of the country on July 1 is estimated at 112,078,611.

The relative rank of some of the cities is changed by their newly estimated population. New Orleans has passed Cincinnati, Rochester has outgrown Jersey City. St. Paul has surpassed Providence, Oakland's population has grown so that it now outranks St. Paul and Providence, and Springfield, Mass., has passed Grand Rapids.

MILLIONS IN CITIES
New York has passed the 6,000,000 mark, Chicago is approaching 3,000,000, and Philadelphia the 2,000,000 mark. Cleveland is somewhat short of 1,000,000, Detroit, for which no estimate was made, probably has passed the 1,000,000 mark, as its population was estimated at almost 900,000 a year ago.

Conservatives and Provincials Unite To Upset Election

Vancouver, July 19.—Following a conference between leading figures of the Conservative and Provincial parties yesterday, it was announced this morning by R. L. Maitland, President of the B.C. Conservative Association, that the two parties had agreed to unite in the effort to void the result of the election in as many constituencies as possible.

Vancouver, Mackenzie, North Vancouver, Lillooet and Chilliwack are decided upon. Fort George is another that is being investigated with a view to joint action, it was stated.

New Westminster, July 19.—G. M. Sloan will ask Judge Howay for a judicial recount of the ballots cast in the Dewdney election, it was learned to-day. J. A. Catherwood, Conservative, is elected by a narrow margin, but Maxwell Smith, Liberal candidate, for whom Mr. Sloan is acting, alleges that many ballots in his favor were improperly rejected by deputy returning officers.

DENVER EDITOR DIED

Denver, Col., July 19.—Harry H. Tamm, editor and part owner of The Denver Post, died here early to-day after a short illness.

B.C. TIMBER OPERATIONS SHOW BIG INCREASE; FOREST INCOME GROWS BY 45 PER CENT. IN YEAR

Expansion in all phases of British Columbia's timber industry is indicated in the annual report of the Forest Branch of the Lands Department, made public by Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Minister of Lands, to-day, after forestry officials had completed the compilation of timber figures.

Scaling returns for last year show a total of all material of 2,521,735,000 feet, of which 2,237,000,000 feet was in the form of saw logs, the balance being made up of railway ties, shingle bolts, poles and minor forest products. This is an increase of twenty-five per cent. over the previous year.

ONLY CANADIANS MAY EMIGRATE FROM VICTORIA
The quota of Old Country Born Who May Enter U.S. Filled For Year

No more people from Victoria who were born in Great Britain or the North of Ireland will be admitted to the United States for permanent residence for the next twelve months except those who have already registered their applications for admittance, it is announced at the U. S. Emigration offices in the Belmont Building.

This does not apply to tourists, who may travel freely between Victoria and United States ports on conforming with the usual regulations. The quota of British subjects for the year July 1 to July for the United States, which is 24,007, is already filled. The control of the quota rests with the United States Immigration Office in London, England, and a small allotment has been made to Canadian cities. From those already registered emigrants will be accepted at the rate of ten per cent. a month, spreading the emigration over ten months of the year and closing down for the two months preceding the registration for the next yearly quota. Last year the quota was filled in about five months and travel as far as British emigrants was concerned closed down for the rest of the year. The previous year it closed about May, but in 1920 the quota was not filled.

OPEN TO CANADIANS
The quota law is not effective so far as Canadian-born are concerned, and the effect of the law is to limit the exodus from Victoria to three-a-month of Old Country born Victorians who had registered before the quota was filled and to throw open the gates of the United States without a limit to the numbers of native-born Canadians. They are merely required to measure up to the usual physical and mental standard and must prove that Canada is their place of birth.

FLOODS CAUSE LOSS

Quebec, July 19.—Property damage which is believed will reach over the $100,000 mark has resulted from a series of washouts on the Canadian National lines in the Lake St. John district. The tracks and many small bridges are gone.

ISLAND BUSINESS SHOWING GROWTH

Collieries and Lumber Mills Are Active in Many Places

Crops Benefit by Late Rains, And Fire Hazard Decreases

When the Associated Boards of Trade of Vancouver Island hold the annual meeting in Courtenay next month there will be reasonable cause for optimism. In spite of fuel oil competition impairing the output of the mines, and the declining export market affecting the call for lumber, in many respects the island industries are making good progress, while some of the industries have considerably improved conditions in the face of reduced output to improve plant facilities, and execute improvements which cannot be conducted in times of pressure.

While usually at this time of year the collieries are on short time, several report improved conditions and with the prospect of the Pacific Coast Mines reorganization progressing, another shipping company after being idle for a number of years may be expected to join the producers.

In timber the favorable reports of the cruises in the Nanaimo River area and the prospects of construction at an early date of the Cowichan Bay Railway are stimulating influences, while inquiries have been made in the Port Alberni district with regard to the location of a pulp mill in that neighborhood.

The outlet of large stands of timber which will be afforded by the new line of railway should result in considerable improved conditions in the central part of the island, the work at Deep Bay for one company being an indication of what can be done when easy facilities to tide water are essential. Many small logging companies are operating, and as railway communication is imperative to them, new concerns should start in the territory to be opened up just as they were when the Canadian National was opened up from Victoria northward into the Cowichan Lake area.

CONFIDENCE SHOWN
Confidence in the island lumber industry is shown in such large undertakings as the new Chemainus mill, which is rising from the ashes of its predecessor.

More ambitious lines than ever, Pole contracts are quite an active feature of the island lumber trade at the present time. Agriculture, however, has been handicapped by a dry season, but re-

CONSERVATION OF FORESTS IS URGED

Report of Pulpwood Commission Makes no Embargo Recommendation

Export Tax, if Enforced, Suggested as Fund For Forest Protection

Ottawa, July 19.—The long-awaited report of the Pulpwood Commission makes no recommendations on the question whether or not an embargo should be placed on exportation of pulpwood. It leaves determination of a policy with the Government. The commission, however, makes many recommendations for forest conservation, into which its report of three large volumes enters exhaustively, and observes that if an export tax is adopted the revenue should be applied to forest protection through the Federal and provincial services.

"The application of an export tax," says the report, "ostensibly as a means of conservation but actually for the purpose of securing revenue to apply in other directions, would be adding insult to injury."

EFFORTS NEEDED
Under the head of "conservation," the commission states that definite, radical and constructive steps are of transcending importance if Canada is to protect and further develop forest industries and takes the ground that a chain of publicly owned forests should be developed throughout Canada.

Victoria at the end of last month was relatively $217,600 better off in its civic finances than the corresponding period of 1923, according to a statement issued this morning by City Comptroller Macdonald.

Mr. Macdonald states that the city had received $228,000 up to June 30 in payments of taxes, as compared with $125,000 for six months of 1923, and $157,800 for the whole of the preceding year. The collection of arrears of taxes aggregated $51,600 in the first six months of 1924, as compared with $74,300 in the first six months of this year. The city has managed to reduce its expenses by $45,000 less than in the first half-year of 1923, thus increased prepayments, larger payments of arrears, and reduced borrowings have augmented the large sum set out above.

Senator Wheeler Is Candidate in U.S. For Vice-Presidency

Washington, July 19.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, Democratic proponent of the Senate Daugherty committee, to-day announced his acceptance of second place on the independent ticket for the presidency of the United States, headed by Senator Robert M. La Follette.

Opinion in U.S. Favors Dawes Plan, States C. E. Hughes

Southampton, Eng., July 19.—Pressed for his views regarding the Dawes plan, Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State of the United States, upon his arrival here to-day aboard the liner Berengaria, said: "American sentiment is very strongly behind the Dawes report as it now stands, and we believe prompt execution of that report is of the greatest importance."

LLOYD GEORGE SEES U.S. BACK IN EUROPEAN ARENA, REPUDIATING ISOLATION

By David Lloyd George

Former British Prime Minister

Special Cable to The Victoria Times

Copyright 1924

LONDON, July 19. (By Cable).—Every self-respecting democracy, like every self-respecting family, resents the interference of outsiders in the internal discussions by which it conducts its business. In writing of the outside view of the Presidential campaign in America, I will bear that in mind. But although the stranger outside the gate must not meddle, he cannot pretend to be disinterested. We shall peep through the bars with increasing interest until the issue is decided.

To a certain extent, the personalities interest us. They are not compelling personalities of the bull moose type. Neither have they attracted the amount of anxious attention which Mr. Wilson had drawn to himself by the time of his second candidature. But their fame has been broadcasted in audible tones across the wide Atlantic. The three are certainly better known in Europe than were Mr. Harding and Mr. Cox at the date of their nominations.

SEES ISSUES MORE IMPORTANT

But it is not disparagement, however, to the personal position already achieved by the contestants to say that it is issues and not personalities which will dominate attention. It is for that cause that the coming Presidential election will be watched in Europe with more than usual interest. The 1916 election was a contest of deep concern for the continent. We knew not, at the time, what effect it might have upon the fate of the war then being waged. President Wilson had, by a series of memorable phrases, committed himself deeply to non-intervention, and the Allied nations were not, therefore, hopeful of American aid coming from his return to power. On the other hand, although Mr. Hughes was believed to be in real sympathy with the Allied cause, it was feared that the German vote was too powerful a factor in the elections to enable him to give expression or effect to his views. The nations which were then concentrating their thoughts and energies on the deadly conflict in which they were engaged, could not devote much study to the political struggle in another hemisphere, the outcome of which was so doubtful in its influence on their troubles. To-day we are not so occupied and can afford to look on.

AMERICAN ISOLATION

ABANDONED
The Presidential contest of 1924 comes once more at a critical juncture in the affairs of Europe. And again there is much interest.

DEATH RAY INVENTOR TELLS OF PROGRESS

H. G. Matthews, Visiting U.S., Says He is Perfecting His New Device

New York, July 19.—Zealously guarding the secret of his invention, known internationally as the "death ray," H. Grindell Matthews, the English inventor, arrived here to-day. He denied he had come to the United States to interest the Government or anyone else in his invention. He said the term "death ray" was a misnomer. He said it was an "electric beam" and that he had never called it anything else.

SAYS CONSTITUTION OF CANADA IS TO BE CHANGED SOON

PREMIER KING

HOUSE OF COMMONS TO BE SUPREME IN MATTERS OF LEGISLATION IN CANADA

Premier King Says Senate's Power of Veto Over Bills Initiated in Commons to Be Ended; Action to Be Taken At Next Session; Principle Desired Is Same As That Embodied in 'Parliament Act in Great Britain.

Ottawa, July 19. (Canadian Press).—After being in session since the end of February, Parliament was prorogued by the Governor-General at 3.20 this afternoon.

The end came after strenuous work and with a declaration by Premier King that the Government would next session seek to establish the rights of the House of Commons over the Senate in respect to legislation initiated in the House of Commons.

The privileges sought would be similar to those held by the British House in respect to the House of Lords. There had been differences between the two Houses over the Pensions' Bill, said the Premier. The Senate had made amendments to the Bill. The Commons had declined to accept the Senate amendments and the Senate had then declined to change its attitude and, finally, the Government, to save the Bill being killed altogether, had accepted the amendments of the Senate.

"The time has come," said the Prime Minister, "when the Commons in Canada should seek to gain rights and privileges with respect to legislation which owes its origin to this chamber similar to those which have been obtained by the House of Commons of the Parliament at Westminster. I may say the Government had under consideration prior to the opening of this session legislation with this end in view, but it was anxious the public should feel perfectly assured of the necessity of it before presenting it on the attention of Parliament."

VITAL MATTERS

"Honorable members will recall that at the close of last session and at the close of the preceding session, bills which were passed by this House and which touched matters that are vital to the electorate failed of enactment owing to the action of the Senate Chamber. This year we had the cases of bills that had passed this House at three separate sessions of Parliament and which were rejected each time by the Second Chamber. I think we owe it to the people of the country to see to the supremacy of the elective chamber in Parliament with respect to laws of this kind. I would assure the House that when Parliament re-assembles steps will be taken by the Government to make it possible, by means whereby bills may pass by and with the consent of the House of Commons under conditions similar in principle to those which have been sanctioned by the Parliament of the United Kingdom."

IN BEST FORM

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Conservatives, asked if the Government intended to proceed by way of addressing the House of Commons of the British North America Act, and if so, if the Government intended first to confer with the provinces.

"The Government will take advantage of the recess to consider in what form this matter can best be presented to Parliament," said Premier King.

The Government, he added, would be more effective in bringing about the result aimed at.

BUSINESS CLEARED AWAY

When the House adjourned at 4.30 a.m. to-day, the routine business of the House had been transacted, the estimates voted and the supply bill passed. The Independent Progressives did not permit passage of the supply bill without a struggle. On third reading, E. J. Garland moved, seconded by J. T. Shaw, that it be referred back to committee of the whole with instructions that it be reduced by $20,000, which he estimated as the possible cost of the "junket and joyride" which a parliamentary party proposed to take to Wembley.

Premier King said the Government had reduced the Wembley party as originally planned to two Liberal Whips, the chief Conservative Whip and the chief Progressive Whip. It was hoped the two latter would go.

The press party had been reduced and the entire cost was not expected to be more than $8,000.

About a dozen Progressives supported the Government, which had a majority of thirty-eight on the vote, which was fifty-four to sixteen.

U.S. World Airmen Make Preparations For Atlantic Flight

London, July 19.—The three members of the United States army's round-the-world flying expedition who were given by the Royal Aero Club last night—Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, Lieut. Leigh Wade and Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold, Smith's mechanic—were seen to-day to continue their work on their three aeroplanes, which is progressing satisfactorily.

They were anxious to get away from the distractions of London, and get as much rest as possible before they hop off for Kikwall after the machines have been refitted with pontoons next Tuesday or Wednesday, ready for the long transatlantic leg of their flight.

TWELVE KILLED IN CLASHES IN DELHI

139 Mohammedans and Hindus Injured in Recent Disturbances in City

Delhi, British India, July 19.—An official statement reviewing the recent rioting here points out that the disturbances began with a quarrel over a Mohammedan boy drawing water from a well which he had no right to use. This disturbance was promptly suppressed.

Tuesday's serious disturbance, according to the official statement, developed from the treatment of Muslim butchers over the action of the Government in closing the route to the Hindu quarter for cows destined for sacrifice.

The total known casualties are one Mohammedan killed and fifty injured, and eleven Hindus killed and eighty-nine injured. Four constables were seriously injured and minor injuries were sustained by officers.

The situation now is quiet.

FRUIT CONDEMNED IN TERMINAL CITY

Vancouver, July 19.—Twelve hundred and fifty-eight boxes of pears from California were discovered to have been infested with the fruit fly and were condemned by provincial fruit inspectors here. The shipment, comprising one full car and three cars partly full, arrived in British Columbia during the past three days. As a result of being condemned here, the pears are being returned to their shipping point.

The codling moth develops a worm, which bores into the fruit.

BIG STORM SWEEP ENGLISH CHANNEL AND NUMBER OF FISHERMEN WERE DROWNED

Paris, July 19.—The heat wave which has been so distressing to the contestants in the Olympic games, was broken to-day by a series of violent gales, which wrought havoc throughout France and Belgium and caused damage to shipping and loss of life in the Channel.

Twenty fishing smacks are missing from Ostend and it is thought all were lost. Twenty-six bodies have already been washed ashore. Ten more boats are missing from Portsmouth and fifteen persons are reported drowned.

The storm seems to have blown itself out and better weather is expected now.

OLIVER TO REMAIN AT HEAD OF GOVERNMENT

will not hear of him retiring," Mr. Colley declared. "Before I left Kamloops the executive of the Liberal Association passed a unanimous resolution in favor of Mr. Oliver remaining in office and instructing me to inform him accordingly. This feeling is solid not only in Kamloops but in surrounding constituencies."

Mr. Colley added that he had discussed the whole situation with members of the Cabinet following his arrival here and had come to the conclusion that they would be strongly behind their leader, feeling that his resignation at this time was unthinkable.

"The party is behind the Premier because they know he is the right man for the job," Mr. Colley said. "For him to retire at this time in the middle of the freight rate fight which he has been conducting with expert knowledge not possessed by any other public man would be deplorable."

"I am very glad to have seen the shooting," the Prince declared. The Prince, who is to present the prizes to the Bisle winners this evening, made it a point to be present when the final was being shot.

Lord Chelyesmore, president of the National Rifle Association, and Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London, also congratulated Burke. Thereupon the press photographers who had been held in leash thus far, got busy at once.

"Would your Royal Highness mind shaking hands with the King's Prize winner?" one of the press photographers requested.

The Prince at once graciously complied, and again a fusillade from the cameras opened up on Burke with the heir-apparent to the throne being in the picture.

Burke with a sprig of Maple Leaf in his tunic was hoisted aloft in the famous chair, which had borne previous King's Prize winners and was carried by his fellow-team men on the customary tour of Bisle Camp.

TABLEAU OF PULP MILL AT WEMBLEY IS WORK OF ART

Unique Replica of Establishment is Useful Educational Factor

One of the most interesting and picturesque of the industrial panoramas in the Main Court of the Canadian Pavilion at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley is a large scale replica of a pulp and paper mill in operation.

Although this tableau provides a spectacle upon which the eye delights to gaze, it is very naturally intended to convey to the thousands of visitors who troop through the Pavilion each day some idea of the extent of the pulp and paper industry in Canada. The model itself is eloquent and has aroused very considerable practical interest among that section of the public which is educating itself upon the advantages which Canada has to offer for profitable investment.

The illustration here produced is a faithful presentation of the scene in all its completeness and the water which is seen surging through the sluices is real water and just as wet as the local liquid. It is this touch of realism, as in the case of the large scale replica of a pulp and paper mill in operation.

When the Prince of Wales visited the Canadian Pavilion he was much interested in this particular tableau for the reason that it showed to him the one Canadian industrial activity to which he had not been introduced on either of his two trips to Canada.

He expressed the hope, however, that this part of the exhibition would get attention at some distant date.—H.P.H.

The inventor declared the ray could, if "properly developed," destroy a city like New York. He also said it could "paralyze" whole armies.

"At present," he said, "my ray operates upon half a kilowatt. I am now developing a machine in England that will operate on fifty kilowatts. In the course of six or eight months I shall so perfect my invention that I shall have a ray that could work great destruction."

He declared four or five nations had offered large sums for the invention, but that upon its perfection it would be offered to Great Britain and to no other nation.

HERE TO OBSERVE INDIANS OF ISLAND

H. R. Michel, Lecturer of New York, Among Many Tourist Visitors

To obtain picture slides, Indian relics and observe the manners of the Indians on Vancouver Island, H. R. Michel, of New York, started out from Victoria yesterday on an automobile tour of the Island, equipped with information on the most desirable spots to visit on his mission. Mr. Michel is accompanied by R. Starcher of Yakima. The New York visitor is a member of the Cascade Mountain Club and also plans to do some mountain climbing while he is in British Columbia. As a collector of Indian relics Mr. Michel expects to visit to the Provincial Museum and Archives before he started on his tour.

The Indians of Vancouver Island are to form the subject of a special article in a new issue of a folder to be published by the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau. A request is made that anyone who is in possession of specimens or knows the whereabouts of specimens of Indian petroglyphs communicate with the bureau. It is believed there are some good ones near Sproat Lake, the Race Rocks, East Sooke and the Nanaimo River.

ting the logs and 107 shingle mills were occupied in the manufacture of red cedar shingles.

An interesting section of the report is devoted to the selling of Government timber under timber sale. Eight hundred and fifty-two contracts were entered into for the cutting and removal of timber, not previously alienated lands. The areas covered were estimated to contain 514,877,000 feet of saw material, 6,273,000 lineal feet of poles and 2,300,000 railway ties in addition to minor products.

The average stumpage received by the Government increases 12 per cent over the previous year and reached an average of $1.68 in addition to the statutory royalty. A curve shows the average value received for Government timbers from year to year, including the royalty. In 1912 this was just over $1.50, whereas the Government is now receiving an average of $2.75 per thousand feet. The report further points out that most of the timber service consisted of lodgepole pine, a species of timber condemned up to a few years ago, and even yet considered of little value to the layman.

In many parts of the Province One sale put through for ties of this species netted 16c per tie in stumpage.

ABSENTEE VOTE PLACES MAYOR HAYWARD AS THE SENIOR MEMBER FOR CITY

The tally of absentee votes in Victoria, which has occupied a week, was completed this afternoon, and the official figures issued by Returning Officer W. P. Marchant.

As a result Mayor Hayward displaces Canon Hinchliffe from the head of the poll, and thereby becomes the senior member for the city. The Premier was fourth in the absentee votes, and was the highest among the Liberal candidates.

Mr. Marchant announces that he will conduct the tally on the plebiscite on Monday.

Spend Honeymoon on Jury to Get Her on Capitol Screen

A honeymoon spent serving on a jury in a murder trial—That is one of the many unusual situations to be found in "The Woman on the Jury," a first National production which plays at the Capitol Theatre to-day. And the romance of the bride and bridegroom was nearly wrecked by the experience.

Sylvia Breamer, the featured member of the cast, and Frank Mayo play the roles of the "Newlyweds." Just as they are about to start off on their wedding trip they are served with subpoenas to appear and serve on the jury which is to try a young girl for murdering her betrayer. The bridegroom does not relish having his honeymoon interrupted in this fashion, but his young wife, considering it a lark and eager to avail herself of her "woman's rights," induces him to yield.

Not until after she had been sworn in did the young bride learn the name of the slain man, and she near-

Harry O. Hoyt directed the picture, which is based on the successful stage play by Bernard K. Burns, and the cast includes such favorites as Henry B. Walthall, Lew Cody, Beale Love, Mary Carr, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman, Roy Stewart, Ford Sterling and Stanton Heck.

There are several smashing climaxes in "Twenty One," the Richard Barthelmess production which will be offered to Capitol patrons here, commencing on Monday.

The New York police department placed records at the disposal of John S. Robertson, director of "Twenty One," and he was able to obtain many details of the actual operations of automobile thieves.

The picture revolves around the activities of a daring gang of taxidandits and offers thrills galore. It is a First National release and will be offered for six days, commencing Monday next at the Capitol Theatre.

Victor Varconi Was Interviewed Over Long-distance Phone

Victor Varconi, Cecil B. De Mille's recent recruit from Hungary, has the honor of being the first motion picture celebrity to be interviewed by long distance telephone.

A feature writer of a San Antonio newspaper was the party on the other end of the line. She had with her a native born Hungarian to act as interpreter.

While Mr. Varconi's English is good, he still relies on his native language for idiomatic phrasing.

Varconi will be seen on the screen at the Dominion Theatre to-day in support of Leatrice Joy, who is featured in the Paramount Picture, "Changing Husbands."

Raymond Griffith also has a leading role, and Julia Faye, Zasu Pitts and other big names appear in the supporting cast.

SIX VIOLENT DEATHS

POLICE LOOKED ON WHILE BOY PUNISHED

Mother Spanked Son in Portage la Prairie Following Court Conviction

Portage la Prairie, Man., July 19.—While the police looked on a mother administered a good, sound spanking to her wayward son at the local jail yesterday. The drubbing was given with a heavy rubber strap, and to see that real, old-fashioned "woodshed punishment" was given, the chief of police acted as judge and several constables as witnesses.

The boy, William Lechison, an associate in crime of Percy Moseley, who shot two Winnipeg detectives in a gun fight last week, was ordered spanked yesterday when he was convicted on a series of robbery charges.

OBJECT LESSON FOR THE UNITED STATESNew York Times Contrasts Canada's and U.S. Handling of Liquor Problem

New York, July 19.—The New York Times commenting editorially to-day on the result of the vote in Saskatchewan placing that province in the list of provinces in Canada which have adopted the policy of government sale and control of liquor, finds the result an object lesson for the United States.

"If the new arrangements fail," it says, "they are free to change their opinion and their liquor law again. Such is the advantage of not being fettered by a constitutional amendment."

The Times thinks the result of the vote follows the financial success of government control in other provinces, because the argument "to the taxpayers' pockets" appeals strongly to voters in less fortunate and heavily taxed provinces. Moreover, the majority of Saskatchewan voters were disgusted with the continually increasing non-enforcement of the dry law.

After noting that the Province of Ontario will have a referendum on the liquor question in October, the Times speculates as to the probable result as follows:

"Like our own enthusiasts, the Ontario dries hold implacably to the faith and never bother their heads about its works and practices. The Canadian West is lost. Quebec is a persuasive school of fiscally and morally profitable temperance as against intemperance-breeding, tax-boasting, bootlegging prohibition."

VICTORIA GETS GILLWELL CAMPScouts From All Parts of British Columbia Will Gather
Here in August

For the first time since its inception in Canada the Gillwell Training Course for Scouters will open in Victoria and district this year as the scene of the Provincial camp, August 9 to 26, inclusive, are the dates set for the event which will be attended by scout leaders from all over the Province.

GILLWELL COURSE

The aim of the Gillwell Course is to train Scout and Wolf Cub leaders in the principles, aims, and methods of the Boy Scout Movement in accordance with the ideas of its founder, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, especially as regards the training of Scouters.

The Canadian Gillwell Badge, (the badge which is worn by Scout leaders) consists of a replica of two of the heads from the neck of the Zulu Chief, Dindane; this was captured by Sir Robert Baden-Powell himself during the Boer War.

The badge is carried by the Scouters and the holder thereof becomes a fully qualified member of the First Canadian Scout Troop and may wear the scarf of that troop.

The course for the Canadian Gillwell Badge is divided into four parts, viz: Part 1, Correspondence, Part 2, Practical, Part 3, (a) and (b) Winter Course, Part 4, Commissioner's recommendation.

VICTORIA SCOUTS IN CHARGE

Part 1 is carried out by means of a letter to the Scoutmaster, the object of which is to enable the candidate to test his grasp of the principles and methods of the Scout Movement.

Part 2 is the practical work in camp. Part 3 of the badge, which is at present divided into sections (a) and (b), is held during the winter months under the direction of Deputy Camp Chiefs.

Part 4 is the final test, which is held during the winter months under the direction of Deputy Camp Chiefs. It is a test of the candidate's actual running of a troop of Scouts.

When a candidate has obtained certificates for Part 2 and either one of 3 (a) or 3 (b) (Parts 1 or 2 being taken) he is eligible for the Dominion Camp Chief to the candidate's actual running of a troop of Scouts.

When a candidate has obtained certificates for Part 2 and either one of 3 (a) or 3 (b) (Parts 1 or 2 being taken) he is eligible for the Dominion Camp Chief to the candidate's actual running of a troop of Scouts.

DEFENCE FUNDS ARE VOTED BY COMMONS$8,997,115 Provided For Armed Forces of Canada;
Cadet Training Discussed

Ottawa, July 19.—The main estimates for the militia services, totalling $8,997,115, were approved by the House last night.

The vote asked for cadet services was $450,000.

Miss Agnes MacPhail, Progressive, Southeast Grey, Ontario, moved that it be cut by $400,000.

"We went overseas to kill Prussians," said Miss MacPhail, "and like smallpox, we caught it."

T. G. McBride, Progressive, Carleton Place, Ontario, moved that the vote be cut by $400,000.

"Why should we hang on to the tail of the British Empire?" he asked.

Mr. McBride asked what position Canada would be in if the Orientals should attack the western coast. He deprecated ministerial action in cutting the cadet estimate below the amount voted last year.

NOT REPRESENTATIVE

L. W. Humphrey, Kootenay West, said Mr. McBride's opinions were not representative of the feeling in all parts of British Columbia. He did not think the cadet vote was a necessity.

The MacPhail amendment was defeated by seventy-three to thirty-three, all the Liberals and all the Conservatives voting with the majority.

MEWBURN'S VIEWS

During discussion of the main estimates for militia services, totalling $8,997,115, Major-General S. C. Mewburn, former Minister of Militia, said an adequate militia could not be maintained on so small a vote.

The tendency seemed to be to reduce the services steadily in efficiency. The Government might just as well wipe out the service now and be done with it, he said.

Brigadier-General J. A. Clark, Conservative, Burrard, endorsed General Mewburn's remarks. Major Powell, Liberal, Quebec, also agreed. However, it seemed to him the Canadian forces had too many officers. There were too many generals who ought to be colonels, too many colonels who ought to be majors, and too many majors who ought to be privates.

WOODSWORTH PROTESTS

J. S. Woodsworth, Labor, Winnipeg Centre, protested against the expenditures on the militia and the use of militia in strike areas. Between the Atlantic and Pacific, between a friendly republic and an unfriendly Arctic, Canada needed no militia organization.

Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, interrupted to suggest that one reason why Canada must maintain a military force was that there were organizations, composed of so-called labor men, whose aim and object was to rise up and seize Canadian industries.

Mr. Woodsworth replied that he was glad to hear the Minister admit that. Apparently it was admitted that Canada was maintaining arms not to prepare for war but to attack labor. But if Canada must prepare for war, then not only men, but wealth and land and industry be conscripted too.

THE WHEAT CROP

NOTWITHSTANDING the rain which has fallen in the prairie provinces recently the Canadian wheat crop this year will be considerably less than it was last year. An Ottawa forecast a week ago estimated the 1924 crop at 318,000,000 bushels against 475,000,000 bushels in 1923, but since then there have been more or less continuous showers in districts where they were badly needed and the disparity in the figures will not be as large.

The indications are, however, that there will be a sharp increase in the price and a Chicago expert predicts that it will go as high as $1.50 a bushel. It may go as high as $2. The total production of eleven of the principal wheat producing countries is expected to be 286,000,000 bushels less than the aggregate output last year and this is sure to cause a marked stiffening of the price. The value of the Canadian crop this year on the whole therefore will equal that of last year. This, however, is not going to afford much consolation to the growers in the districts which have suffered most heavily from the long drought.

Plainly, wheat growing is very much of a lottery and even in the most favorable year there are many farmers who draw blanks. Last year's production was the largest in Canada's history, but there were many growers who were just able to keep ahead of the sheriff. Farming is an independent calling in the sense that the farmer is his own boss in the actual operation of his farm. But he has, in fact, the most whimsical, uncertain boss in the world, whose slightest variation of mood can make a bankrupt out of him. That boss is the weather.

"EMPIRE PREFERENCE"

AFTER an initial blunder on the part of the British Empire Exhibition authorities, in connection with the timber which entered into the construction of the royal dais, it might have been supposed that the subject of Canadian woods had been impressed upon the official mind to an extent sufficient to prevent any further resort to constructional material from the Baltic states or other foreign countries.

It appears, however, that the Canadian authorities in London have been stirred to action once more on learning—through the office of the Agent-General for British Columbia—that the stands for the Pageant of Empire, which is to take place next week, are to be built of Baltic timbers. Whether the intervention of the High Commissioner and Premier King will result in a right about face on the part of the Exhibition authorities, or whether another "patchwork" structure will materialize, remains to be seen.

Similar trouble was met with during the construction of the royal dais which was used by the King for the opening ceremony. Only by a piece of good fortune, as a result of a combined Canadian attack in London, were the King and Queen able to sit on thrones fashioned out of Douglas Fir, and stand on boarding of English oak, instead of on Oregon pine from the United States.

After all it is a British Empire Exhibition and a glorious opportunity for the Commonwealth to preen itself upon its productive versatility. And it has been shown, was shown in the case of the dais, that ample British Columbia lumber is on hand in Britain to furnish the requisite material for these various structures.

A GOOD INVESTMENT

SO far this year the Victoria Auto Camp has welcomed 746 cars. The occupants of those cars numbered 2,382 persons. Up till this time last year only 429 cars had entered the camp and their human freight totalled only 1,432 persons.

This substantial increase in the number of visitors should afford the trustees a very considerable amount of satisfaction and remove the last remaining doubt as to the worth of the investment from those who "whispered" unkind things about the conduct of the camp last year.

There is no doubt that the auto camp has already paid for itself many times over and the great majority of those who visit it, and go away perfectly satisfied, talk about it and come again with new friends.

COL. OBED SMITH RETIRES

NEWS comes from London to the effect that Colonel Obed Smith is about to retire from the position of Superintendent of Emigration after sixteen years in that capacity. For nearly a quarter of a century Colonel Smith has been associated with the Department of Immigration at Ottawa. In 1901 he became Commissioner of Immigration for the West with headquarters in Winnipeg and seven years later he was sent to England as Assistant Superintendent, afterwards rising to the premier position, and he has been there ever since. Colonel Smith has had an interesting career. He was born in Liverpool sixty years ago and came to Canada in 1882 after a schooling which ended at the age of thirteen. He went on a farm in Manitoba and drove mail; kept a store at Turtle Mountain; became a stenographer and bookkeeper, made himself an expert shorthand writer; served seven years as an article clerk in a Winnipeg law office; entered the service of the Manitoba Government when the late Joseph Martin was Attorney-General; was successively right-of-way solicitor, accountant of the House, and chief clerk of the railway department; then he followed the private practice of his profession for a year or so—all this was before 1901.

Many Canadians who have come to this country during the last fifteen years have good cause to remember the friendly advice which Colonel Smith gave them when they applied to him for information. He is a kindly man with a deep understanding of human nature and the intending emigrant always knew that he was talking to one who had emigrated and succeeded.

May Colonel Smith long enjoy the rest he has earned.

THE WEMBLEY EXHIBITION DELEGATION

A MILD flurry has been caused in the House on a vote of twenty thousand dollars to send an official delegation of members of Parliament and representative newspapermen to the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley. The sending of this delegation, which a few years ago when economy was not a first consideration of government, would never have been made a matter of serious criticism, has been seized upon by the Opposition as an example of great extravagance by the Government. As a matter of fact, there will be only three members of Parliament, namely, the Chief Whip and Assistant Whip of the Liberals, the Chief Whip of the Progressives and four newspapermen, sent to Wembley at the country's expense involving a total expenditure of not more than $7,000. Chief Conservative Whip Boys would have gone as a member of the parliamentary delegation but for personal reasons, as he explained to the House. The discussion in the Commons occupying several hours of time cost the country probably considerably more than the $7,000 involved in the sending of a representative delegation to the greatest exposition ever held of Imperial resources illustrating to the Empire opportunities for inter-Imperial trade and development.

DE VALERA FREE AGAIN

AMONN DE VALERA has been released from jail by the Irish Free State Government. His health is reported to be good and he seems to have relieved the monotony of his confinement by studying the Einstein theory and other mathematical problems. It will now be interesting to watch De Valera's programme. There is no evidence that he has given up the idea of Irish independence outside the British Empire. His "cease fire" was merely a bow to the inevitable at a time when public sentiment began to manifest itself overwhelmingly against him. He now enters the arena again when there is an undercurrent of feeling which indicates that the Free State is still some distance from the happy family position which it had been hoped would be realized before this.

There is no suggestion that the present Government has lost its hold or influence; as a matter of fact the old difficulties with which commercial travellers from Britain used to have to contend have for the most part completely disappeared. At the same time trade depression and timid capital present a discouraging condition at the moment.

De Valera will either follow the example which his lieutenants set while he has been "resting," and confine his political activities to constitutional limits, or he will interpret the somewhat gloomy outlook which now prevails as a hint to him to "start something."

Now that the Conservative Party is aware of its fate at the recent elections it will no doubt set about the necessary consultation with its leader and find Mr. Bowser a seat.

The national exchequer at Ottawa seems to be doing well out of British Columbia's liquor business. With another Province in the "wet" column we can see the Treasury Department figuratively rubbing its hands together.

An "inspiration" from London says that Canada stands alone in her demand for status recognition. We seem to remember that Premier Bruce and ex-Premier Smuts have had some very pointed things to say on the subject of equality within the Empire.

One of the Labor members of the British House of Commons suggests that the official title of the Secretary of State for the Colonies should be changed to Secretary of State for the Dominions. It's a good idea; they would soon get used to the "strange" name in Britain.

ICHABOD

From Chambers' Journal
When earth was new and fancy flew
On wide, unfettered wings,
Man still could see the witchery
Within the heart of things.
The nymph that glows within the rose,
The spirit that greets the shoot,
And early streaks the pearly dew,
On leaf and flower and fruit.
Should see the glow that mingles the gleam,
The elf that lights the morn,
And glides with gold the broomy wold,
The circus, and the corn;
The naiads slim and drowsy prim,
That haunt the valley glade,
The fauns that prance in wanton dance
And revel in the shade.
Now earth is old, and fancy cold;
Man neither sees nor hears;
His place affords no other term than Resounds in heedless ears.
No more is heard the honeyed word
Of leaf to budding flower,
No more is seen the kiss between The shadow and the shower.
—William Douglas.

Dr. Frank Crane on "Handshaking"

(Copyright)

CAME some days ago Dr. Francisco X. Suachell, health expert at New York, and declared war against handshaking. We wish to line up under Dr. Suachell's colors and take our place among the enemies of handshaking.

We confess to a certain dislike to being pawed in any way. We always disliked old gentlemen who, in our youth, used to pinch our ears and pat our heads.

That the amiable friend who shows his good will by pounding us on the back means well does not keep us from wanting to murder him.

And then there are those who are always catching hold of your arm and putting their hand upon your knee and otherwise massaging you.

We may be finicky, but when we need treatment we prefer to go to a Turkish bath and pay our dollar and a half and have it done by a husky who knows how.

Handshaking is merely a custom. Still more, it is merely a symbol.

Now, a symbol or a custom is of value only because everybody has agreed to it. They could just as well agree to another one.

Therefore, we hereby move that handshaking ought to be abolished. The motion is put and carried.

Instead of a handshake we would suggest the salute. Some such gesture, for example, as is used in the army. It would be just as easy for two people to shake the hand to the forehead, or, if they prefer, to the nose, as it would be to shake each other's hand.

When we think of all the various palms we have been in contact with—hard and horny palms, sweaty palms, gooey, listless and reluctant palms, overbearing and suggestive palms—we are inclined not to feel well.

Then there is the energetic person who thinks he must show his cordiality by grasping all of your phalanges and breaking them in his tremendous clasp. He is the man whose notion of pleasantness is pounding you on the back with a blow that loosens your back teeth.

Not, of course, that we would be pernickety. There are times. We do not pretend to deny that there are times. And when, along with the time, there comes the place and the girl, we can do our little task of handshaking and palm massaging along with the next man; but these things are not matters to be discussed in public.

THE VALUE OF RHETORIC

From The London Times

The value of rhetoric has lately been brought to trial by the Cambridge Union. No generation has ever been more ready than our own to pour ridicule upon the airs and graces of its predecessors, upon whose elaborate adornments of life and manners which they were pleased to cultivate; and the art of rhetoric has fallen under the general ban. We are of necessity influenced by it, but we like to believe that we are not.

Let us have the story, not the style, we cry, forgetful that only its style can make a good story effective. Let a man say what he thinks and say it plainly, we demand, careless that lucidity is all the rhetorician's exercise the most difficult and subtle. We are almost forgetful of elegance, as if some deception were implied in it. Though we absorb verbosity of speech and pen as no people has ever done before us, we are, by outward profession, stern, simple, silent business men, scornful of rhetoric, contemptuous of decoration.

This strange contradiction between practice and precept received at Cambridge an ironic endorsement. The motion for debate was that "this house has the highest regard for rhetoric." Mr. Baldwin, who opposed it, explained that he had consented to do so because it had been arranged that Mr. Churchill was to precede him, in which circumstances he would have had to do no more than "stand up for one brief moment and say: There, gentlemen, is my case." In Mr. Churchill's absence he was compelled to a longer and probably less effective argument. It was all of no avail. Cambridge, like the rest of the world when confronted with the question of rhetoric, could give no decisive vote one way or the other.

Mr. Baldwin lost his case, but an ironic spirit hovered over the division. The opinion was exactly balanced, 237 voting for the motion and 237 against it. So the controversy stands where it did.

AN ONTARIO PROBLEM

From The Hamilton Herald

The campaign against joy-riders whose darkened cars may be seen any night on the highways and crossroads outside of the city, cannot be pressed with too much vigor. The announcement that parking without lights will be taken as prima facie evidence of wrongdoing and incur a fine of $50 should be a deterrent itself, but wholesale prosecutions are undoubtedly needed to stop the practice. It should not be hard for the township police to secure convictions. The police in warring on the one-armed drivers, who make a practice of mixing chaffing and courtship, to the danger of the traffic, seem to have driven the spookers to the seclusion of the side roads, where their darkened vehicles are even a greater menace. Sounds of risible revelry and high-pitched shrieks, which emanate from the be-curtained and darkened cars at the side of the road, constitute an acute embarrassment to the decent motoring public, which happily is in the majority.

WHERE ALL AGREE

From The London Times

The result of the Japanese elections was an overwhelming victory for democracy. It is rather remarkable that, according to all reports, the question of Japanese exclusion from America seems to have played little or no part in the elections. Yet it is known that Japanese public opinion has been deeply stirred by the action of Congress. The right explanation is probably the obvious one, that in this matter Japan is united, and that every party feels the same desire to uphold the status of Japanese abroad. Whatever disintegration modern ideas may have produced in domestic politics they are not likely to affect the country's foreign policy or to diminish that national sense of which Japan is so acutely conscious.

TOO MUCH FOR THE COLLEGE STUDENTS AT U.B.C.

From The Literary Supplement, University of B.C.

Man has attempted to investigate a universe, from the division of an electron to the combination of planets, from the minuteness of an amoeba to the greatness of a whale, and from the depths of the Pacific to the heights of the Himalayas; but curiously enough, he has never turned the searchlight of his observation on such an important object as woman. To describe her, the whole realm of man's language affords no other term than "mysterious," something which he cannot understand and never hopes to. Believe me, God never worried so much as when he had to make woman.

Why Suffer Needlessly?

Glasses permanently relieve most headaches—7 in 10 are the exact figures. This means that seven headaches in every ten are unnecessary ones, which can be done away with quickly at a very modest cost. We have within the year "scrapped" a splendid Test Room, and re-modelled it with newer and better scientific instruments and are now fully equipped to find the cause of that headache.

WANT RENEWAL OF WATER AGREEMENT

Saanich will endeavor to renew the existing water agreement between that municipality and the City of Victoria for another term of ten years. Clerk Sewell was instructed last night to communicate with the City Council and explain the desires of Saanich, clearly and concisely.

Reeve Macneil stated that, providing Oak Bay entered into the joint municipal supervision of beaches plan, an inspector of camp sites and waterfront resorts would be appointed next year. This officer will be officially known as superintendent of beaches. It would be his duty to report any fire hazard which might result from chimneys being placed in tents, and to see that the beaches were in a sanitary and attractive condition.

Application from Dr. H. A. Williams for the post of medical health officer of Saanich was received, but the council decided that there was no vacancy at the present time, and that when there was it would be advertised.

The following road work was authorized by the Council: Work totaling $175 on Beckwith Street; $300 repairs to the wheezy old $160 repairs to Seymour Avenue. Burnside Road will be oiled as far as Raper's Farm, while East Saanich Road and a part of Glasgow Avenue will also be oiled.

ORGAN GRINDER LEFT FORTUNE TO HIS BENEFACTORS

Special to The Times
Auckland, N.Z., July 19.—An old organ-grinder who wheeled his instrument around on every morning for years past popular airs at Auckland street corners, has just died leaving a fortune to be distributed amongst many kind-hearted citizens who at one time or another befriended him.

Joseph Newell was as well known as the post office. He was always poverty-stricken and more than one kind old woman took him into a nearby cafe and gave him a cup of hot tea to keep out the cold of the winter morning. Newell, it is now recalled, used always to get the names and addresses of his benefactors.

Now he has died and left thousands of dollars, house property in Auckland, and considerable real estate in the United States to about thirty people who at one time or another did him a kindness. One old woman who gave him a hot cup of tea receives $1,000 as her recompense.

AMENDMENT OF B.N.A. ACT IS ASKED

Ottawa, July 19.—In moving concurrence in a minor amendment made by the Senate to the resolution establishing extra-territorial rights for Canada, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, replied in the House of Commons to criticism directed at the legislation by Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Premier of Ontario. Mr. Ferguson had declared that the legislation was a blow at the constitution and that the provinces should be consulted regarding amendments to the British North America Act. The charge was to some extent uncalled for, said Mr. Lapointe. The provisions were not affected by this resolution. Moreover, Premier Ferguson's protest was three years too late, as the legislation was originally proposed by a Government of which Mr. Ferguson was a supporter. The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A Form of Public Ownership

MUTUAL Life Insurance is a form of public ownership. The policyholders own the Company and, through its elected directors, control its affairs, subject to regular government audit and inspection. The Mutual Life works on a safe, sound, conservative, actuarial basis.

Profits derived from the business of the Company are paid back to the policyholders. That means that insurance in the Mutual Life is insurance at a minimum cost.

The investment of the funds of the Company is directed by able and far-sighted financiers. The history of Mutual Life policies shows that insurance in this Company can be carried at a surprisingly low cost, on account of the liberal dividends paid.

Discuss your insurance needs with our agent, who will explain the Mutual policies. Or write us direct for booklets on Mutual Insurance.

A Sure Relief For Women's Disorders

Orange Lily is a certain relief for all disorders of women. It is applied locally and absorbed into the suffering tissue. The dead waste matter in the congested region is expelled, giving immediate mental and physical relief; the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened, and the circulation is rendered to normal. As this treatment is based on strictly scientific principles and acts on the actual location of the disease, it cannot help but do good in all forms of female troubles, including delayed and painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, etc. Price $2.00 per box, which is sufficient for one month's treatment. A Free Trial Treatment, enough for ten days, worth 35c, will be sent free to any suffering woman who will send me her address.

CONSERVATORIES OF MUSIC IN GERMANY HAVE LEAN PERIOD

Leipzig, Germany, July 19.—Conservatories of music are declining alarmingly in Germany. Recently an institution with a normal enrollment of 300 pupils went bankrupt, and a great many smaller undertakings have been forced to liquidate. During the inflation period these institutions were kept above water only by the fact that the foreign music students paid five times the tuition of the natives. Since stabilization has taken place, however, thousands of foreigners have left Germany, finding it too expensive, and the music lovers who remain behind can for the most part afford to pay only about one-half the pre-war tuition fee.

How desperate the situation is may be judged from the fact that the conservatory students are permitted to play in movie houses and in cafes, a thing that was anathema before the war. There is also no objection to their earning money on the side by playing at dances.

The chief reason for the plight in which the musical art finds itself is the fact that the inflation period and the war have wiped out the middle class, which before the war was the principal supporter of the finer arts.

SOFT COLLARS

Kept White and Stylish Through This Laundry's Modern Methods

Snugly form-fitting, lying smooth and unwrinkled. White as the day they left the factory. So your soft and semi-soft collars will look when laundered our "New Method" way. That yellow tinge so often noticeable after home washing will be absent. The creases that come from imperfect ironing will be missing, too. Just phone us to call.

C.G.I.T. GIRLS WILL HAVE SUMMER CAMP

Teen-Age Girls to Have Jolly Time at Beaver Lake

Many teen-age girls will be delighted to know that plans are nearly completed for the C.G.I.T. Summer camp at Beaver Lake on July 28 to August 6. Happy indeed are the memories of former camps with long days of study and play, camp-fire sing-songs, wonderful appetites and starchy nights beside the lake. The Victoria Girl's Work Board, under whose auspices the camp is held, announces that the camp leader will be Miss Annie Fountain, B.A., the Provincial Girl's Work Secretary for British Columbia. They have also secured Miss Olive White, Presbyterian missionary deaconess for Vancouver Island, as leader of the senior group of girls. She will also act as sports officer. The camp mother and nurse will be Mrs. D. E. Beveridge, who has had splendid experience in various similar camps in Alberta. Other group leaders will be Miss Gladys Beall, Hazel Sargent, Sara McKell and Beatrice Anderson. Everything possible will be done to look after the health of the girls and insure their safety. Boats cannot be used without permission. Swimming is allowed only during scheduled periods under proper supervision. Girls wishing to go to camp or wishing further information may phone Business Manager of Camp, Miss Wood, Y.W.C.A., or Mrs. Bishop, General Secretary Y.W.C.A., phone 4930.

Kumtuke Club—The Kumtuke Club have been invited to hold their picnic on Monday at the home of Mrs. R. P. Matheson, 337 Constance Avenue, Esquimalt. Members are asked to provide their own lunch and to take the No. 4 car to Constance Avenue any time after 5 o'clock.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Lockyer, of Vancouver, are in the city.

Col. H. S. Tobin, of Vancouver, is a guest at the Empress Hotel.

Mrs. Griesbach, of Chemainus, is registered at the Empress Hotel.

PRINCIPALS IN RECENT WEDDING

The above group shows Mr. and Mrs. James Gray, whose marriage was a pretty event of last Saturday. Mrs. Gray before her marriage was Miss Nellie Ley Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Turner of The Uplands.

For the entertainment of the many visitors who are expected in the city for the tennis tournament week, the Victoria Lawn Tennis Club has arranged to hold a dance at the Alexandra ballroom on Thursday, July 21. Heston's orchestra has been engaged for the occasion.

Miss Mary Procter, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Procter, returned to Vancouver on Thursday after spending the past year in England. Dr. and Mrs. Procter, who are staying at their cottage at Finerty Bay for the summer months, went over to Vancouver to meet their daughter and returned with her yesterday morning.

Many of her friends in this city, made when she was supervisor of domestic science for the city schools, will be interested to hear that Miss Juniper has been appointed principal of the Yorkshire Training College of Housecraft at Leeds, England. The college has a staff of eight teachers and a secretary, and over eighty students in training.

A very pretty wedding took place on Thursday at 12 noon when the principals were Miss Olive E. Logan, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Logan, and Archibald P. Robertson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Robertson of Nelson, B.C. Rev. Dr. Sippell of the Metropolitan Methodist Church performed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, 1114 Ormond Street. Miss Bessie Robertson, sister of the bridegroom, was the only bridesmaid, and Mr. George E. Logan, brother of the bride, supported the bridegroom. Miss M. J. Anderson of Sidney was at the piano. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson left on the afternoon boat for Vancouver and after their honeymoon trip will make their home at Nelson.

Authors' Association—At the residence of Mrs. William Henderson, 2150 Oak Bay Avenue, the Victoria and Islands branch of the Canadian Authors' Association, both regular and associate members will meet for a round table conference at 5 o'clock on Monday. The national president of the Canadian Authors' Association, Mr. Lawrence Burpee of Ottawa, will preside.

Music Successes—In the musical examination of the University of Toronto Conservatory of Music, conducted in Victoria last month, the ten pupils entered by Mrs. Bridges passed very creditably in pianoforte. They were: First year, introductory, Dorothy Gilman, honors; Myrtle Smith, Ruth Baxter, honors; second year, elementary, Helen Cochran, honors; Marian Cochran, Dulcie Brethour, Gordon Hambley; third year, preliminary, Audrey Hunter, fourth year, junior, Florence Hambley.

The Catholic Women's League is giving a luncheon in the private dining-room at David Spencer's Limited on Monday at 1 o'clock in honor of the national president, Mrs. W. H. Lovering of Hamilton and eleven delegates from the Edmonton convention.

Victoria's Beautiful Children

Ross, the pretty little son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Buckle, of 421 Vancouver Street, will attain his second birthday next month. He wonders why the photographer has interrupted the jolly game he has been playing with his bricks.

AL FRESCO PLAY TRIUMPH OF ART AND VIVID COLOR

"Curse of Chirra-Poonie" Aroused Huge Audience to Enthusiasm

In a beautiful setting of emerald lawn framed in magnificent old trees and with fragrant roses growing in the "wings," Victoria's much-heralded al fresco play, "The Curse of Chirra-Poonie," had its premiere last evening in the grounds of Sefton College before a large and enthusiastic audience. Not a little of the success of the production depended upon the beauty of the setting, for it would be difficult indeed to find a frame more suited to the production of al fresco pageantry than this delightful retreat whose velvet lawns and fine trees form a natural amphitheatre of green beauty and dignity. It is as a spectacle first and foremost that the production makes its appeal. The entry of the Princess Sundari in the opening scene is a symphony of vivid color, suggestive of the re-incarnation of a Persian fresco. In her brilliant robes and striking gold headpiece, the Princess enters in a palanquin borne by two sturdy retainers. She is preceded by an ever varying procession of ladies and nobles of the Court clad in brilliant robes and jeweled headpieces, diminutive pages and flower bearers, imposing attendants with enormous hats and striking shields, and a throng of dancers in gay apparel. The dances are one of the most striking features of the play. The first is the Nautch dance in which twenty-six girls in striking robes and blue yashmaks perform the sinuous measures made famous by the dancing girls of India, while Miss Helen Macdonald, in a beautiful costume of black and gold, dances with much grace an Oriental pas seule. Another beautiful number is the Kashmiri dance in which Miss Roberta Balcom dances the solo dance with consummate grace and the lightness of a thistle-down. These two dances were arranged by Madame Valda. Unusually effective and original was the Scimitar dance performed by a bevy of pretty girls in harem-like costumes of palest yellow, shaded to deep orange with glittering headpieces and gleaming scimitars which they whirl aloft, this number being originated by Miss Lillian Michaels.

The principal speaking parts fall to Miss Marquita Nichol, a dainty and appealing Princess Sundari, who sings with much charm and sweetness in the final scene; Capt. Hugh Allan, as Prince Hassan, is all that an Eastern lover should be, while A. Legge-Willis as the blind King of Tipurah gives a performance of much dignity and impressiveness. Mrs. Belby was a striking figure in the prologue.

As a fitting concomitant to the brilliant spectacle the music is all that could be desired. Mrs. A. J. Gibson and Mr. Drury Pryce leading the orchestra intently. Through the play songs were rendered by such well-known artists as Mrs. Harry Briggs, whose fine voice was heard to perfection in the open air; Miss Eva Hart, who sang a pastorate delightfully; Arthur Gore, who contributed the number "Pale Hands I Love," from the Indian Love Lyrics, with fine effect; and Mr. Matheson, who as the robber chief, sang the solo of the "Robbers' Chorus."

INCORPORATED 2ND MAY, 1870

EMPEROR OF ASIA DUE SUNDAY NOON FROM THE ORIENT

Over 500 Passengers on Board; Many Prominent People on Saloon List

Averaging twenty knots an hour the Canadian Pacific Emperor of Asia is expected to make quarantine from the Orient about noon to-morrow.

There are over 500 passengers on board, 350 of whom are cabin passengers. Prominent among passengers aboard the Asia is Dr. D. T. Sloan, superintendent of the Rockefeller Foundation Hospital at Peking, China, accompanied by a party of Chinese students en route to Baltimore, Ohio.

Other prominent passengers include: W. H. Crandall, manager of the Standard Oil Company at Padoga Anchorage, Fuchow, China; Irvin R. Dunlap, prominent missionary, heading a party of five other missionaries, en route to Ohio; P. Evans, of Tientsin, China, en route to Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. Yates; Mr. Patterson; Mr. and Mrs. McFadden; Mr. and Mrs. Sarrior; Mr. and Mrs. Grier and two daughters; Mr. and Mrs. Arker-strom and two daughters and Mr. Milligan, all from the American colony in Shanghai, en route to various points in the United States. Owing to a very rich silk cargo on board, the Emperor of Asia has been putting on speed and making fast time.

The time used is Pacific standard, for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 9 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table, the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

Bread-Always your First Thought

Whenever you must prepare a hasty luncheon or a late evening supper, what do you think of first? Sandwiches, isn't it? And a sandwich is at least three fourths bread. Too, if it's SHELLY'S BREAD, it is the most nourishing food you can serve.

SHELLY'S is rich in the essential food elements. Why, a pound loaf contains 59% of the proteins, 38% of the carbohydrates, and 77% of the mineral salts, such as iron, calcium and phosphorus, needed by the body each day. No other single food supplies such large proportions of these elements.

But, because "There's a difference in bread," it will be to your advantage to select the high food-value loaf. Don't just say "bread"—say SHELLY'S.

Here's a delicious recipe for club sandwiches, probably the most appetizing sandwich you can serve:—

CLUB SANDWICH

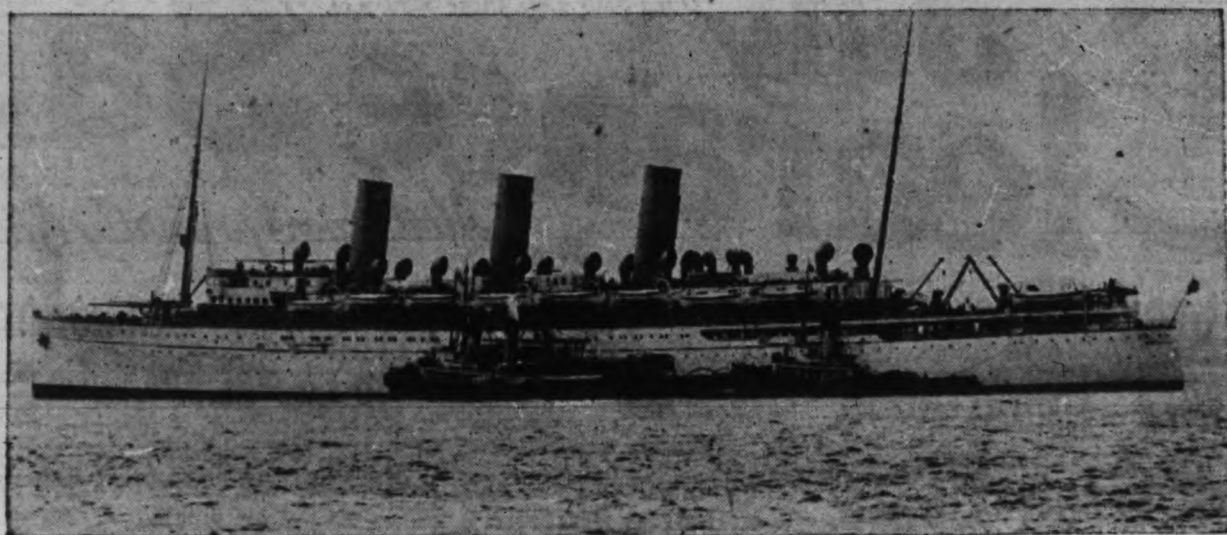

Trim crust from three slices of SHELLY'S and toast. Butter one slice and cover with roast chicken cut thin. Butter both sides of next slice and lay over chicken. Cover with lettuce and lay strips of freshly fried bacon over lettuce. Pour on a little mayonnaise dressing and cover with slice of toasted bread. Cut diagonally and garnish with sliced tomato, pickle and olive.

WILL DOCK HERE SUNDAY AFTER FAST TRIP FROM ORIENT

CANADIAN PACIFIC LINER EMPEROR OF ASIA

PRESIDENT GRANT DUE HERE EARLY SUNDAY MORNING

Has Valuable Silk Cargo and Many Passengers

With a valuable silk cargo and a list of 350 passengers the Admiral Oriental liner President Grant, Captain M. M. Jensen, will arrive at William Head from the Orient at 6 o'clock to-morrow morning, and after securing pri-etique is expected to dock at Ogden Point about 7.30 o'clock.

Cargo for discharge here aboard the liner amounts to 300 tons, while the mail consigned is fifty bags and some fourteen bags for the aircraft. For Seattle the liner has over 3,000 bales of silk valued at $100,000, in addition to a large shipment of tea loaded at Shimidzu and heavy shipments of general Oriental merchandise.

Of the 350 passengers on board, 100 are cabin and the remainder steerage. Some sixty passengers will disembark here. Among the prominent passengers on board is Larry Lehrbas, city editor of the Shanghai Press of Shanghai, China, who gained world fame as one of the kidnapped victims of the Chinese bandits about a year ago. Lehrbas is going to the States on vacation. John Nelson of Washington, D.C., assistant chief of the Far East Bureau of the Department of Commerce, and wife, are also reported aboard the President Grant. Others known to be aboard include: Com. R. C. Giffen, U.S.N., returning from the Asiatic Station; the Rt. Rev. J. Maginley, Bishop of Manila en route to Fresno, California, and Caroline Wilson, magazine writer and correspondent, en route to New York.

MOUNTED CLIMBERS' ASSOCIATION FORMED

Over 200 Set Out on Opening Ride of Trail Riders of Canadian Rockies

Field, B.C., July 19.—Two hundred and six prominent Americans, Canadians and Europeans, the largest number of people ever gathered in the Yoho valley of British Columbia, set out for Yoho Camp Friday morning on horseback on the opening ride of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies. This unique gathering marks an epoch in the history of the North American Rockies, recording, as it does, man's first attempt to form an association of mounted mountain climbers.

The trail riders of the Canadian Rockies whose membership is open only to those who have ridden not less than fifty miles through the mountains on horseback is the outcome of the dream of several prominent Canadians and Americans who camped at Yoho last summer, under the temporary presidency of Dr. Walcott, plans were subsequently formed for the first annual ride on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

All expectations of attendance were shattered by Thursday noon, when 206 scientists, authors, artists, photographers and mountain enthusiasts from many branches of the world's professional and leisureed classes rode up the steep trails from Field, and packed their horses in the Yoho Camp corral.

This beautiful camp of chalets, situated in the region of the clouds a mile above the sea, had been reinforced with twenty Indian teepees.

In the centre of this primal camp was a huge Indian sun-dance lodge which had been erected as a camp headquarters by the Stony Indians under the supervision of Chief Walk-in-the-Rain.

SOUNDINGS

After loading 600,000 feet of lumber supplied by the Cameron Lumber Company the Charles H. Cramp, of the Argonaut Line, departed yesterday evening at 7.45 o'clock for San Francisco, where she will pick up a consignment of general cargo before proceeding to New York via the Panama Canal. The vessel has altogether 2,500,000 feet of lumber and shingles which are to be delivered at Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Completing her lumber cargo here by loading 200,000 feet of lumber at the Ogden Point docks in addition to the large quantity of roofing and other construction material, the Canadian Winner, of the C.G.M.M. limited, left port at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She is bound for Montreal.

For cleaning and painting by Yarrow, Limited, the Coastwise Steamship & Barge Company's steamer Mogul is being repaired and was floated into dock. The Mogul is used in the freighting of ore from Stewart and Anxoy to Tacoma. Repairs to the Sandheads lightship will keep the vessel on Yarrow's ways for another two or three days.

First of a series of excursions inaugurated by the C.P.R. arrived in the city to-day from Bellingham. Special excursion rates have been put into effect, and nearly 200 took advantage of the week-end excursion to come to Victoria by the ferry Motor Princess.

Negro Waiters Are Unable to Serve to Syncopated Music

No more will the seductive wail of the syncopated saxophone pervade the dining-rooms of the coastwise liners of the Admiral Line plying between San Diego and Victoria, according to a suggestion from Passenger Traffic Manager E. Grant McMillen of the Pacific Steamship Company, for jazz music in the region of napkins and plates has had a wild effect on the Afro-Americans who serve from soup to black coffee. They just can't make their feet behave as the muted cornet calls for "Sweet Mama."

So hereafter, stately minuets may accompany the earlier segments of the menu. Wagner or Brahms probably will be present at the entire and roast and "The End of a Perfect Day" will come along with the dessert. All jazz will be reserved for deck and ballroom dancing.

Observation has taught the steamship company officials that the colored servitors vainly have tried to control their dancing toes, but to no avail. Under the spell of some soul-tearing "Blues" waiters have been known to throw gyrations never witnessed even in stage acrobatics in an effort to avoid spilling a tray of soup and still at the same time answer to the tantalizing harmony of a cluster of syncopated notes.

So, hereafter, elegant, unexciting music only will be heard in the dining-rooms of the coastwise liner-H. F. Alexander and her sisterships the Emma, Ruth and Dorothy Alexander.

Winnipeg Crews Are Way Out in the Lead in Western Regatta

Winnipeg, July 18.—By amassing a grand total of 193 points in the first day's programme of the Northwestern International regatta here yesterday, members of the Winnipeg Rowing Club assumed a commanding lead for possession of the Lipton trophy, emblematic of aggregate honors of the meet.

The local oarsmen captured first in ever event and further covered themselves with glory by gaining several seconds and thirds.

Port William, by gaining sixth place in the bantam eights, is next to Winnipeg in the aggregate with twelve points; Kenora is third with eight, and a strong finish in the bantam fours, which gave them second place. Duluth is credited with 7.5 points in fourth position. The crews from St. Paul, Minn., Regina and Port Arthur, failed to reach the point column, although they put up a game struggle and were only beaten by the superior finishing powers of the locals.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

Bantam Fours—Winnipeg, 1; Kenora, 2; Port William, 3. Time, 6.30.4.

Open Double Sculls—H. Webber and H. O'Grady, Winnipeg, 1; H. Ben-Dixon and A. Roddy, Duluth, 2; A. McBean and A. F. Richardson, Winnipeg, 3. Time, 6.30.

Junior Fours (first heat)—Winnipeg, 1; Kenora, 2; Port Arthur, 3. Time, 6.05.

Junior Fours (second heat)—Winnipeg, 1; St. Paul, 2; Regina, 3. Time, 6.25.

Junior Singles—H. Webber, Winnipeg, 1; A. McBean, Winnipeg, 2; A. Richardson, Winnipeg, 3. Time, 6.54.

Bantam Eights—Winnipeg, 1; Port William, 2. Time, 5.55.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The West End Players will hold a vaudeville and dance next Friday at Semple's Hall, commencing at 8.30 o'clock. Several well-known local artists will perform.

The staffs of the British America
Paint Company and W. J. Pendergast & Sons Limited will hold a joint picnic on Saturday next at the north end of Elk Lake.

Appointment of a new police commissioner in Vancouver will be made on Monday or Tuesday next. Attorney-General Manson stated after a meeting of the Cabinet this morning.
Stolen three weeks ago from W. A.

Gourlay of this city, a Ford car has been recovered by the police at Parksville. The stolen car was traced by the City plain clothes department up-island and its recovery is now reported.

Dr. Ray E. Ziegler of Campbell River, has been appointed physician at Campbell River for the Indian Department. On the eligible list of inspectors for the livestock branch of the Department of Agriculture Alfred F. Darnell of this city, is placed twelfth on the list.

Several hundred members of the
city this morning by trolley-ho for Sanich, where a picnic outing is being held. The procession formed up in front of the Scott Block, comprising of six trolley-hos and a long line of private cars. In the van was a trolley-ho filled with children whose merry laughter was a good augury of the success of the event.

The South Saanich Farmers' Institute held their regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening, the judging of the garden competition having taken place during the week.
Prizes for this competition were presented at the meeting by G.
Robinson of Elk Lake. The prize list was as follows: 1. W. D.
Mitchell; 2. J. Matcorm; 3. Dean Brothers, there being six strong competitors.

A report on the season at the Auto Tourists' Camp at Curtis Point up to July 17 presented at a meeting held last night showed the record at the camp for this year was 746 cars for that period, while the occupants of the cars numbered 2,382. For the same time last year there were 425 cars with 1,412 persons. It was reported that the night before there had been seventy-three cars in the camp. This was not, however, the largest record for the season, there having been as many as seventy-eight cars in at one time.

The Centennial Church Methodist Sunday School held its annual picnic at Elk Lake on Wednesday. A happy crowd of boys and girls left the church in trolley-hos at 2 o'clock.
During the afternoon a delightful programme of games was carried out and many indulged in swimming in the lake. At 5.30 the party sat down to a beautiful spread. After supper the children romped around while the older people played an exciting ball game. The new pastor, Rev. Mr.
Hilbert, was present and did much to entertain the younger people. The trolley-hos conveyed the happy party back to the city at 7 o'clock.

At an executive meeting of the Great War Veterans Association it was decided to make Everett the destination for the annual marine excursion Labor Day. A letter of condolence was sent to the senior naval officer, Esquimalt, conveying the sympathy of the association in the loss of Lieutenant and Mrs. Watson and boys from the Navy Yard in the recent sailing disaster. Eight new members were accepted as follows: Messrs. Hudson, Pickett, Shadforth, Granrose, Lynn, Colbert, Young and Ball. A letter was read from a member in Montana thanking in connection with his pension claim.
It is anticipated that with the facilities afforded by the Dominion Government, this claimant will shortly receive a pension, together with an adjustment for the period covered by the retrospective award.
The meeting was very warm thanks to the local G.W.V.A., stating that the member feels he is being well looked after even though he is now domiciled so far away.

GROWERS ON ISLAND HAVE NO COMPLAINT

Fair Treatment Received From Brokers, Delegation Says

Vancouver Island Growers are well satisfied with the treatment received from the Mutual Brokers, it was expressed yesterday before the special commissioner appointed at Ottawa under the Combines Act, who took evidence at the Empress Hotel yesterday. The commissioner was appointed to inquire into alleged monopolistic control of markets by the Mutual Brokers, Limited.

H. E. Tanner and W. Somers, representing Saanich and Gordon Head berry growers, gave evidence before Lewis Duncan, the commissioner.
The principal complaint is from the mainland.

Tomato growers offer objections to the system and the treatment meted out to them by the brokers. On the mainland fear is expressed that the marketing is getting into the hands of combines.

Form Partnership And Move to New Location in City

C. Fendlebury and Thomas Fisher, both experienced tailors, have gone into business on a partnership basis in their new store at 617 Fort Street.
The former has been conducting a is considered the finest breeches maker in British Columbia.

Both men have had a great deal of experience in their line of business.
They specialize in English lounge suits. Mr. Fendlebury for some years was located in the West End of London, and also was in business on Fifth Avenue, New York.

Mr. Fendlebury was contractor to H.M. Canadian Navy here, the Royal Naval College, the Dominion Government of Canada and the University Military School.

MR. KILLED U.S. CONSUL IN TEHRAN

Robert Imbrie Died in Persian Capital After Being Beaten And Kicked

Washington, July 19.—A message received to-day by the State Department from United States Minister Joseph S. Kornfeldt at Tehran, Persia, said Vice-Consul Robert Imbrie died of shock at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon after having been brutally kicked and beaten by a mob.

WERE TAKING PHOTOS

London, July 19.—British officials to-day confirmed the report of the death of Major Robert Imbrie, United States Vice-consul in charge at Teheran, Persia, who, it was stated, was attacked by a fanatical mob yesterday morning while photographing a public fountain in company with an other American named Seymour.

Major Imbrie died during the arrest, while Seymour, whom it was impossible to identify further, was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

MORNING STAR SKIPS TWO LIEBEL CHARGES

Seattle Freighter Steals Out of Vancouver Under Cover of Darkness

Vancouver, July 19.—While under arrest at a dock here the Seattle coast freighter Morning Star in response to a radio message from Seattle, slipped away last night.

The Morning Star, after a turbulent passage of Active Pass on Sunday, when two members of the crew were drowned and considerable cargo je-tisoned, was plastered on arrival here with two Admiralty court writs. In one the plaintiff, Captain George Maude, a Maynoe Island rancher, claimed $5,000 salvage, and in the other C. G. Frampton, of Vancouver, claimed $2,500 for lost cargo.

Operated by the Star Navigation Company, of Seattle, the principal owners being the master, Captain J.
G. Gilmore, and a brother of his mate, who is Arthur Smith, the small freighter was unable to furnish bail.

Mr. Stewart, placed in possession of the steamer by the authorities, believed that the members of the crew refused to go ashore to get medicine for him, so he was obliged to go. On his returning he saw the Morning Star passing through the Narrows.
The vessel left without obtaining clearance papers and is thought to be in United States waters by this time.

WHEAT AT $1.50 IS CUTTEN'S PREDICTION

Successful Chicago Dealer Looks For Further Upward
Price Swing

Crop of Northern Hemisphere 286,000,000 Bushels Below 1923 Level

Chicago, July 19.—Arthur W. Cut-ten, Chicago grain dealer, who was reported to have made more than $1-500,000 in a clean-up in corn this week, said to-day he believed wheat would reach $1.50 before the end of the crop year. He bought corn on his prediction last Spring, that it would go to a dollar a bushel before the end of July, and made a fortune when it went about that figure.

SMALLER CROPS

Washington, July 19.—A reduction of 286,000,000 bushels in the wheat production of eleven of the leading producing countries of the Northern Hemisphere as compared with last year's crop is indicated in reports to the Department of Agriculture. These eleven countries, producing sixty-four per cent of the world crop, will have 1,912,000,000 bushels of wheat this year, as compared with 2,198,000,000 last year. A large part of the reduction is due to the smaller crop in Canada.

CORN IN ARGENTINA

Argentina is producing its largest crop since 1914-15, with a total of 274,000,000 bushels as compared with 174,102,000 bushels last year. It is calculated Argentina will have an exportable surplus of about 150,000-000 bushels of corn this year.

JUGO-SLAVIA TO HAVE AN ELECTION AT EARLY DATE

Belgrade, July 19.—Premier

he, with his former Cabinet, had resigned April 12.

LOEB ADMITS HE KILLED FRANKS BOY

Says He Struck Victim While Leopold Was Driving Auto
in Chicago

Chicago, July 19.—Proposal of a Chicago newspaper to broadcast by radio the proceedings at the trial of Nathan Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb, confessed kidnapers and slayers of Robert Franks, a neighbor boy, was severely criticized by the Chicago Church Federation to-day, while Judge Denis E. Sullivan and Judge Philip L. Sullivan of the executive committees of the Circuit and Superior Courts declared such a course might cause a reversal of any verdict rendered.

LOEB'S CONFESSION

Young Loeb has finally admitted that it was he who actually killed the Franks boy, The Chicago Herald and Examiner said to-day. The two sons of Chicago millionaires made confessions nearly identical concerning the kidnapping except that each said he had driven the automobile used to abduct the boy and accused the other of striking the boy over the head with a club and gagging and strangling him in the car. Loeb, the newspaper said, learned that the penalty was the same regardless of whether he had driven the car or struck the blows and then admitted that he had killed young Franks.

OBITUARY

There passed away last evening at the family residence, 3174 Harriet Road, Saanich, Daphne, daughter of Mr.
and Mrs. John W. Creighton, aged five months.
Her parents and two brothers. The remains are resting at the Thomson Funeral Home, 1255 Quadra Street.
Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, when Rev. Dr. Cameron will conduct the service. The remains will be laid to rest in Ross Bay Cemetery.

RAILROAD PUBLICITY MAN VISITOR TO CITY

Members of the Chamber of Commerce, acted as hosts to-day to James Morris, publicity manager of the Southern Pacific Railway with head offices at San Francisco, who arrived in the city on Friday morning.

Mr. Morris was accompanied by Captain Maxson, commander of the S.P. boat which has just been launched at Tacoma, Mrs. Maxson and their daughter Dorothy, who christened the boat and received announcing their arrival this morning, and arrangements were speedily made to show them the city and its environs.

THREAT MADE

SENATE NULIFIES RECOMMENDATIONS ON PENSIONS BILL

Ottawa, July 19.—Senate amendments to the Pensions Bill which would nullify the recommendations made and passed by the House of Commons, were rejected by the House of Commons for the second time to-day.

The amendments were the only business left before Parliament this morning and the House of Commons waited for twenty minutes for the message from the Senate insisting upon its amendments on the ground that the bill had not been presented to the Senate until after prorogation had been announced. The message stated that the bill had obviously not received sufficient consideration in the Commons and it was hoped that the legislation would be presented next session when it could be given more mature consideration.

Hon. H. S. Bland, Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, could not see the reason for the Senate action. Its criticism of the House of Commons was unfair, he moved that a conference be held between the two Houses to consider the amendments which the Commons could not agree upon.

Should the Senate insist on its amendment, the Commons would have to accept them in order to save the pension bonus which would au-tomatically expire in September.

OPERATIVE Cases

Must Go to the Surgeon—Says Jordan

Do not misunderstand us when we say that most of our cases restored to health have been given up as hopeless by other systems. You know, and we know, that there are cases that cannot be restored to health.
Tumors, for example, must be taken out or the patient must eventually die.

Decomposed organs do not come within our scope of treatment.
Such cases are always referred to physicians and surgeons. Uncorrected functional disturbances of the eye, brain, spine and nervous systems, if neglected, lead to organic disintegration.

By far the greater percentage of so-called diseases are only functional disturbances of the nervous system—ENERVATION.

We are ENERGICIANS. Our work is to restore ENERGY to the enervated. When this is done, disease becomes conspicuous by its absence.

We do not accept, neither do we treat, organically diseased cases.
Such cases are for Physicians and Surgeons, and we are frank to say so. We want no cases that we cannot benefit.

FOXY LITTLE FOX.—Very, very foxy indeed to win a kiss from such a pretty maid. But he'll pay for it with his little hide some day, because the pretty maid is a friend of the person who runs this silver fox farm and the little fox will make a nice fur before long for the pretty maid when the cold weather comes. This fox farming is extending itself to be one of the lucrative industries of the district around Victoria, largely because of the climatic conditions produced by the sea air.

BUSY WOMAN POLITICIAN.—Mrs. Isatta Jewel Brown of Kingwood, West Virginia, who is shown above with her daughter, was the woman who nominated John W. Davis at the Democratic convention in New York. At the San Francisco convention in 1920, Mrs. Brown seconded Davis's nomination. Before her marriage to the late representative William G. Brown of West Virginia, she was well known on the stage. She is an aspirant for a seat in the United States Senate.

BRILLIANT COURT STAR.—Willard Crocker of Montreal, brilliant Canadian tennis star, who entered the final round for the Canadian doubles championship, paired with Morice of Montreal, but was defeated by George M. Lott Jr. of Chicago and Sam Hardy, formerly of the U.S. Davis Cup team.

FAST COURT MAN.—D. Morrice, clever Montreal tennis player, who showed fine form in the Canadian tennis championships contests in Toronto, last week.

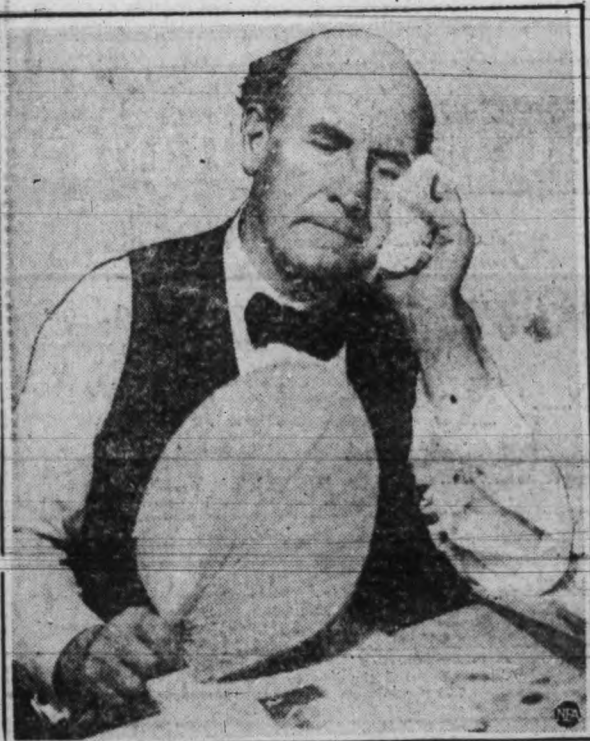

FIGHTING REBELS.—Gen. Primo De Rivera, head of the Spanish military directory, who may assume command of the campaign against the rebellious tribesmen of the Spanish zone in Morocco.

SHOT.—Zaghlul Pasha, Premier of Egypt who was shot and wounded by an unknown assailant when about to leave Cairo.

WAR GENERAL AT TOP.—Gen. Von Ludendorff, who has become leader of the German National Socialists.

JUST ABOUT ALL IN.—This remarkable snapshot of William Jennings Bryan was caught near the end of the Democratic convention when the "Commoner," weary from arduous sessions and a bit dispirited by unfriendly receptions given him, shows in his face that he is an old man whose political race is almost run.

WHERE THE WINE AND DOLLARS ARE STARTING TO FLOW.—This is loganberry time in the prolific garden district around Victoria. Here is one of the rich vineyards which yield the juicy berry. The berries are gathered and taken to the Saanich wine press, where the juice is allowed to ferment until it produces the pleasant and kicky crimson vin soleil which is sold by all Government liquor vendors in British Columbia and is now extending its sale through all the wet provinces of Canada as far east as Manitoba. The loganberry vineyards and the wine industry is becoming an important industry on this island, which has turned out to be pre-eminently suited to it. This picture was brought to The Times by Fred Barnes, Saanich agriculturist.

CHARLEY LIKES LITTLE NIP OF GRAPE JUICE.—Charles Wayland Bryan, Democratic nominee for vice-president, is bald. Like his famous brother, William J., he goes in for grape juice and skull caps. But where the "Commoner" is of medium height and leaning to corpulence, "Brother Charley" is a big, upstanding man. He's more than six feet tall, with lots of pep. He holds his head up, shoulders back and walks with swinging, vigorous stride. And he has a bristling white moustache, whereas William J. is smooth of face. They call Charles Bryan "Brother Charley" because for more than twenty years he has lived in the shadow of his brother's greater fame. But he has been THE Bryan in Nebraska ever since his election to the governorship in 1922. He has been the acknowledged leader of the state's dry forces ever since William J. quit Nebraska for Florida. The new Bryan in national politics is fifty-seven and has lived in Nebraska for thirty-one years, coming here from Salem, Ill., where he was born. He was a traveling cigar salesman for a time. Then when his brother got important enough to have a private secretary, "Brother Charley" got the job. Later he was publisher of his brother's paper, the Commoner. Still later he was publisher and editor. He was mayor of Lincoln from 1915 to 1917. He believes in municipal ownership of public utilities. In fact, he established a municipal coat yard in Lincoln and saved users $4 a ton. "Brother Charley" is not the orator that William J. is. But he has the reputation of being a better organizer.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JULY 19, 1924

VACATION TIME THROWS ATTRACTIVE BEACHES

LURE OF SEA PROVES IRRESISTIBLE TO CHILDREN AND GROWN-UPS ALIKE

Beaches Around City Present Attractions Of Exceptional Order

Plan of Management Between City and Saanich Works Out Well; Resorts in Unorganized Territory Not Yet Fully Appreciated by Victorians

Cities on peninsulas favorably located to the open sea occupied in warlike times strategic importance. In times of peace the people who inhabit such favored locations gain therefrom exceptionally fine bathing beaches where the summer camps can be conducted with comfort and ease, and the children may enjoy the surf. Victoria is well supplied with woodland and natural parklike expanses, but the object of this article is to draw attention to the beautiful beaches of the Saanich area, the city waterfront facing the Strait of Juan de Fuca, and the less known beaches facing the Royal Roads.

ACCESSIBILITY

Not only does a natural beach, but accessibility, and proximity to shade enter into calculations determining the popularity of the beaches here. On the whole it may be said that the beaches are well within the reach of all people at the present time, though some, as best served by private automobile. The magnificent expanses of Cordova Bay, and Cadboro Bay can scarcely be rivalled anywhere, and to the southern end of the former may be linked the splendid hillside view from Mount Douglas over the sparkling gulf sprinkled with islands, its horizon bounded by the snow-capped peaks of the Washington mainland.

FORMERLY POPULAR

The beaches at the northern end of the Saanich peninsula were once the scene of excursions by the Victoria and Sidney Railway, now but a memory, long before those places which are now favored were heard of. They have just the same attractions, while the "interurban" line has been created at Deep Bay, on the West side of the peninsula that class of summer cottage settlement such as is to be found also at Brentwood.

The parks, beaches and reserves belonging to the city and Saanich with the sole exception of the city property at the Gorge, is now controlled by a joint committee of the two councils, which has been in operation since 1917 with increasing value annually. It has established bathing pavilions, laid on water, created picnic grounds, and in some of the larger places has provided chalets for the dispensing of refreshments. These properties being largely served by motor vehicles, parking places have become necessary, and are now being extended from year to year. At small expense much valuable work has been done, and all is planned to fit into the general development scheme of the future.

NEARER THE CITY

In the neighboring municipality of Oak Bay the Willows beach is a great attraction, while the most favored resort in the city is that at Foul Bay, long noted for its summer cottages. A whole suburb has grown up owing to the beach's special fascinations. The southern front of Esquimalt municipality, particularly at Macaulay plains, is most popular in that part of the suburban area.

West of the organized territory is the Esquimalt Lagoon, which will always be appreciated while there are some very promising beaches further around, reached conveniently from the high road to Metchesin.

All the beaches named may be regarded as affording that accessibility which places them in the range of use by all classes of the citizens. A number of them have their summer cottages, occupied by a succession of families the season through, while other vacationists, nestled beneath the trees, happy in their exclusive freedom from neighbors.

Altogether Victoria is fortunate in having such excellent stretches of sand and shingle for the young children, and for their elders in which to disport themselves.

Visitors Delight In Blessings of Sea Coast City

Proximity to, and familiarity with a possession do more to discount its real worth than any other single factor. Entering into the question, Victoria and its environs are surrounded by beaches on all but one side, the Saanich Peninsula, and even there, a mile after mile of sandy beach stretches away on either side of the land to the point twenty miles north of the city. Visitors arriving in the city are

DELIGHTFUL SHADY BEACHES AND ROMANTIC BAYS GIVE CHARM TO VICTORIA'S PICTURESQUE COASTLINE

One of the outstanding reasons for Victoria's great charm is that being on a peninsula she has more than a hundred shady beaches and romantic little bays dotted along her seventy miles of sea frontage, each with a lure and personality all its own.

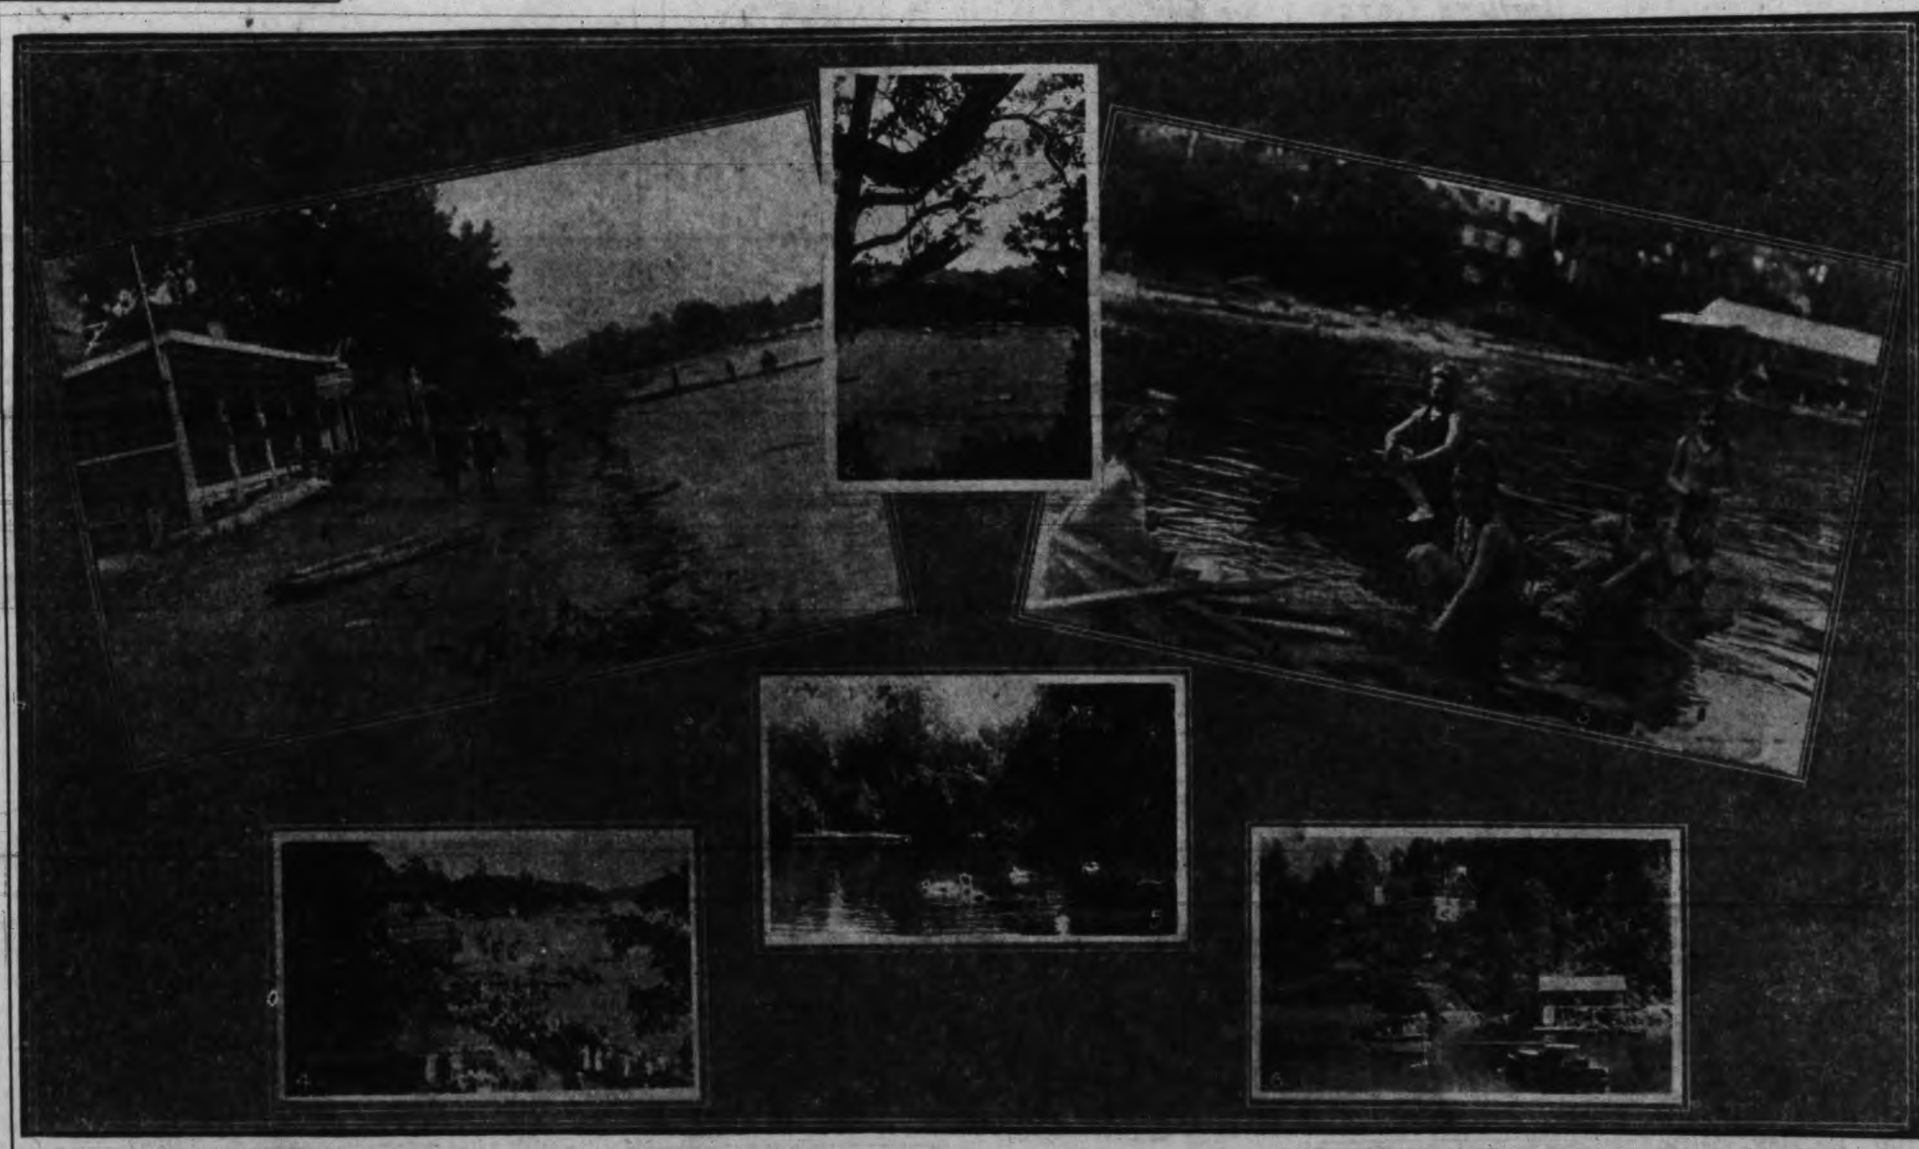

There are few cities in the world and certainly none on the Pacific Coast that rival Victoria for its unusual shore line. There are some beaches facing the Straits of Juan de Fuca and open to the sweep of the Pacific Ocean tides. Others are almost landlocked and the waters are so clear they appear to have never been ruffled since creation. There is every variety of beach.

All are within easy reach of the city and connected by street car, motor or stage.

The well known beaches such as Foul Bay, Oak Bay and the Willows are lined with care-free happy children, now that vacation days are here and there is no greater enjoyment possible than they get from riding logs and building rafts from the lumber on the beaches.

Within a short walk from the more popular beaches are to be found secluded spots for those who desire a quieter day by the water. Towering trees close to the water's edge offer comfortable shelter to pitch a tent or string a hammock and within a few miles from the centre of the city or from the well known beaches can be found these enticing retreats so alluring during the holidays and only made possible at such close distance to the city because of the extensive water frontage and because of the many other beaches easily accessible.

City and Saanich Work Together to Improve Beaches

In the city of Victoria the Victoria Beaches and Parks Committee of the City Council is responsible for the care of the beaches surrounding the city of Victoria, while the Victoria-Saanich Beaches and Parks Committee has supervision over the beaches in the greater Victoria area, in which the city of Victoria has an interest and to which thousands of Victoria people go throughout the summer.

A sum in the neighborhood of $7,000 is spent on the beaches and parks jointly by Victoria and Saanich, each contributing an equal amount. This year $2,300 was the amount donated by each the Saanich contribution being made up with remitted taxes on property owned by the city. For the city beaches and parks the sum of $24,000 was appropriated this year, the greatest portion of which will be spent on the parks. The chairman of the committee is a consistent fighter for a greater appropriation so that added attractions can be placed at the beaches.

Cadboro Bay and Cordova Bay are two of the beaches where the joint committee has done effective work as the result of which these two charming resorts have been gaining in popularity every year. Parking sites for cars, steps to the beach, fresh water supply and tables for picnic parties are among the conveniences that the committee has placed at these and other beaches.

The "Free" at the Gorge, as it is known to young swimmers, where accommodation is provided for bathers, is also under the care of the joint committee and is used by thousands who delight in the warm Gorge waters during the summer, especially during the vacation period.

An invitation has also been extended to Oak Bay Municipality to join hands with Victoria, as Saanich has done, in the care of the beaches in the Greater Victoria area. Oak Bay, Saanich Victoria, share alike in the great natural gift of the beautiful shore and it is probable that the city and its neighboring municipalities will come to an arrangement where they will work harmoniously together in making the most of this gift.

Victoria Possesses Natural Advantages For Life of Camper

As a summer resort, Victoria possesses all the natural characteristics which make it easily adaptable to the wants of summer vacationists and campers. From one place to another, along the water-front, are clustered little colonies of campers. Straggling settlements of these people, many of them nomadic in their tendencies, stretch from the most popular and central beaches into the unsettled and primitive land which lies many miles out of the city limits.

Possibly the most densely populated of these campers' centres is Cordova Bay. It is estimated that during the week there are 2,000 visitors on Saturday, Sunday and Wednesday afternoons, inclusive of those who are already camped there. In addition to this on the remaining days of the week possibly 300 to 400 visit the place daily. This estimate means that the total of persons parading upon the beach, boating on the water or swimming in the cooling waters is well over 11,000 from one Monday to the other.

These figures are gained from the Chamber of Commerce, whose representatives have carefully gone into the subject and counted the number of families residing on the shore above the beach.

FIND NEW SPOT

This year the public has made a discovery. It has found a wonderfully fine bathing beach near the Esquimalt Lagoon. It is as a matter of fact, a part of the shore line of Albert Head and has existed, though little known, for a matter of several hundred years. But it has lately become a popular resort with campers and swimmers of Victoria and surrounding districts. There are approximately 100 families which have made this neighborhood a temporary home through the summer months, and many more flock to the place on holidays.

Cadboro Bay is another of the most popular of Victoria's camping grounds, although the majority of those who visit this place spend only the day there. Nevertheless, there are tents and huts along the shore which house a large number of the camping population of the city.

One of the most enticing camping spots is Beaver Lake, where the Y.M.C.A. has made its headquarters for the summer. Here about fifty boys have been camped ever since June. The personnel of the camp constantly changes, as different squads of boys take over the premises, some for longer periods. The camp is situated on the shore of one of the most beautiful lakes on the island, where boating and swimming are among the greatest attractions.

Hundreds Make Their Homes on Beaches During Summer Season

Great Out-of-doors Attracts Large Percentage of Citizens; Many Flock To Lakes Within Easy Distance of City.

Thousands of tourists every year carry away with them pleasant memories and beautiful impressions of Victoria, the much-lauded mecca of holidaying folk from every part of the continent. It is a place which, once visited is never forgotten, and the many who have spent a part of the glorious summer months roaming about Victoria and its environs have praises upon their lips which are finer than the most eloquent publicity which experts can contrive.

Those who most appreciate Victoria, however, are Victorians. Hundreds and thousands travel the beautiful highways daily, marveling at some new sight of splendor, which, in the heart of a country which has been termed "a fairland of majesty and color," has not before been predominant, but was only a part of the delightful whole. There are these thousands who travel the highways. But the fact that they travel signifies that they do not make the most of the sights of splendor which encompass them at all times. Their views are mere glimpses at best. Those who are most appreciative and who see the varying tints of the sun as it slowly descends over the glittering Olympics, whose ease at once embraces a colorful sea, an unblemished summer sky and a lofty boundary of mountain peaks far to the West, and who see it all in its changing moods, these are the people on the beaches. These are the little families of campers who make their homes by the sea. Or they may be down-town folk, tired of the unsympathetic pavement. At any rate, they look with eyes that see and understand the limitless beauties with which Victoria is blessed. It is these people from whom comes the truest conception of the glory that belongs to every resident of this happy community.

Victoria's chief points of beauty lie near the sea.

The beaches are too numerous to enumerate. Starting from Albert Head, and coming along the coast towards Esquimalt Harbor, there are dozens of bays which afford picnic parties the most delightful surroundings for a day's outing or a short holiday under canvas. From Esquimalt as far as Macaulay Point, in and about McLaughlin Point, past Work Point, West Bay, and then into the Victoria Harbor itself, there is an endless coastline of dancing, dimpling water, enticing the young and hardy to refresh their healthy bodies in its depths.

GREATEST RESORT

Further on is the Gorge-Arm. Winding and reaching far into the heart of the industrial district, and eventually emerging once again into open country. And here it forms one of the greatest and most popular resorts of pleasure anywhere in the West of Canada, popularly known as "The Gorge."

But this is only one of the many delightful resorts in and about Victoria. Along the waterfront from the long beaches along the Dallas Road, from Ross and Foul Bays, around Trial Island to Oak Bay, Willows Beach and Cadboro Bay, thousands of persons flock. Tents and summer cottages are huddled on the sand. Great, leaping flames from numerous camp fires flicker against the evening sky along these many beaches. And hundreds enjoy the glorious climate which only rivalled by the scenery.

CORDOVA BAY

Nor does the throng of summer pleasure-seekers stop here. Among dozens of unfrequented little nooks which are amazingly easy to find, there is always some sign of habitation, either in tent or by some beach fire. There is a small settlement of tent-dwellers at Cordova Bay. A whole colony lives in solid little summer homes in the wooded country just above the banks of this great horse-shoe in the water. And a veritable city population lies stretched upon the sand or gambols in the blue waters during any warm summer day. This is Cordova, biggest of all the Southern Island's beaches.

Brentwood is another popular salt water resort. In the past three years Elk Lake has become a place of recreation which comes to the fore during the summer. Both with tourists and with the people of Victoria and surrounding points this locality has become a wonderful holiday ground. Here the water is as warm as the most critical can require for pleasure. Surf-board riding is one of the pleasures of the lake shore visitors.

Web Cord and Sprayed Rubber Tends Towards Success of Balloons

As the tire season advances, the value of the two big improvements, web cords and sprayed rubber, announced in the Spring by the Dominion Tire Company, are being amply demonstrated.

The web cord process, by eliminating cross threads, gives a more resilient tire and eliminates internal heat caused by friction of the cords. In the web cord process the cords are held together by a web of pure rubber and this web is made by drawing the cords through a bath of latex, the milk of the rubber tree. As the cords emerge from the bath they are drawn over a heated drum, which quickly dries the rubber latex into a web. The tension on the cords keeps them perfectly flat and even, so that in the body of the tire the strains come upon each individual cord with perfect uniformity.

For low inflation balloon or balloon type tires, in which the play of the cords is much greater and more frequent than in high inflation tires, this uniformity of strain and absence of friction are of special value. Because of the extraordinary strength produced by the evenness of the cords, the one great doubt in regard to the durability of balloon tires, which of necessity have fewer

NEW AUTO ROAD OPENS TO CARS

The Revelstoke - Arrowhead auto road is now open for traffic. With a few exceptions tourists who have arrived in the city during the last week have continued their journey to Arrowhead, thence by boat to West Nelson, and eventually to Nelson, the Banff-Windermere Road and Banff.

The popularity of the road is shown by the fact that one day shortly after it was opened the ferryman at one point handled fifty-four cars.

The sprayed rubber used in the walls of balloon tires on account of its great purity and elasticity is also of special value to this type of tire in which the walls are subject to much more play than in hard inflated tires. Sprayed rubber is simply latex milk of the rubber tree evaporated and used fresh and pure without preservatives or coagulating acids. This process preserves all the qualities of the original rubber without impairment of any kind by preservatives necessary in ordinary rubbers.

Rubber latex is brought in tank ships from the company's own plantations to New York, where it is pumped into tank cars and brought direct, for immediate use, to the Dominion Tire Factory at Kitchener, Ontario.

Both the web cord and sprayed rubber processes are used exclusively in Dominion Tires in Canada.

WHO'S WHO IN THE AUTOMOBILE WORLD

A. E. HUMPHRIES

President of A. E. Humphries Motors Limited, dealers for Vancouver Island and in Dodge Brothers' motor cars. Mr. Humphries came to Victoria about three years ago from Leithbridge, Alta., where he had been identified with the Dodge Brothers' car since it was first introduced in Western Canada. This company has built up a reputation for good service and fair dealing and since opening up in Victoria have placed a large number of Dodge Brothers' cars in the hands of satisfied owners.

Dodge Brothers do not make a practice of changing the models of their cars each year and therefore owners of these cars do not find themselves faced with the heavy depreciation loss which this custom sometimes entails. In spite of the fact that new models in other makes are being announced daily, Mr. Humphries reports a steady demand for Dodge Brothers cars and is anticipating a good season's business.

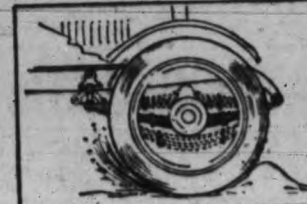

The Secret of An Easy Riding Car

The automobile of today is a different machine to that of five or six years ago. Motors are more reliable, tires give two or three times more mileage, bodies are greatly improved in appearance and comfort, and they ride better if you know how to look after the springs.

I can imagine the average motorist saying that there is not much to look after in the springs, all you have to do is to splash a little oil over them now and again.

Now it may surprise you to know that it is just as easy to OVER LUBRICATE the springs as it is to not give them sufficient oil. The idea of the springs is to absorb the shocks when driving over rough or uneven roads. When your wheels pass over a bump, the

WHEN SPRING LEAVES ARE EXCESSIVELY LUBRICATED, AN OBSTRUCTION OR BUMP CAUSES SPRINGS TO HIT EACH OTHER. THE RESULT IS SHOCKS AND SHOCKS CAUSE SPRING LEAVES TO

a great deal of damage, because the excessive bouncing flattens the springs, and allows the frame to bump the axle. You would not think of taking a heavy sledge hammer and giving the axle a few dozen heavy blows, yet the effect is just the same if your springs are so lively that they hit the axle every time you go over a big bump. In addition to this you will have large bills for broken spring leaves.

If, however, you DO NOT LUBRICATE the springs sufficiently, grit and water work in between the leaves and rust them up. You will then have TOO MUCH FRICTION between the leaves and they will have so little movement that they hardly act as springs at all, and every time you go over a bump, the shock nearly shakes your teeth down your throat, and your car soon starts to rattle and bolts and nuts become loose in every part.

The spring's leaves should receive attention about once a month. If they are covered with mud or gummy oil, clean them with a brush and some kerosene. Now tighten the bolts on the spring clips that hold the spring to the axle, as it is important they be kept tight at all times. Loose spring clip bolts are responsible for most of the broken spring leaves.

The shackle bolts that hold the springs to the frame should have grease or oil forced through them at least once a week. If these bolts are not lubricated REGULARLY, the old grease or oil mixes with the road grit that works in and very soon the hole through the bolt is blocked up and the shackles squeak and rattle. If you find you cannot force the grease through so that it oozes out at BOTH ends of the spring bushing, the best thing to do is to jack up the frame to take the weight off the springs then remove the bolts and clean out the holes.

If there is very much play in the shackle bolt bushings, or if the bolts are worn badly, they should be replaced or they will make the car very noisy on the road. Examine each spring carefully to see that no leaves are broken. If any are, replace at once or the other leaves will break very quickly.

When you have attended to the spring clip bolts and the shackle bolts, paint the spring leaves with one of the special spring oils or ordinary lubricating oil. Do this about once a month. If you find that the springs are too lively, fit a pair of good shock absorbers and they will improve the riding qualities of any car and prevent spring breakage.

Crankshaft in Overland Cars A Perfect Unit

Tests and Improvements Make it Essentially Dependable

Among the important and fundamental parts of any engine, probably the most important is the crankshaft. To it falls the arduous and continuous task of converting the reciprocating energy of each piston into rotary energy, for the purpose of transferring the engine's power out into the transmission line.

"Every Overland crankshaft represents the last word in the best and most modern engineering development as practised in the manufacture of these important units," says an official of Willys-Overland at the Toronto factory.

The slightest imperfection of balance means undue vibration. Inaccurate crank shaft and crank pin bearings mean excessive wear, with consequent loose bearings and the impossibility of perfect adjustment. Insufficient main bearings allow whipping and warping of crankshaft and a consequent misalignment of parts.

Each Overland crankshaft is forged in one piece from the highest quality steel and is, of course, specially heat-treated to provide the necessary wearing qualities combined with strength. Each bearing is ground accurately to size and the Overland crankshaft is carried in three strong main bearings that positively ensure tremendous rigidity and eliminate any possibility of whipping or warping.

Each Overland crankshaft when finished is tested dynamically and statically for balance—that is to say, at high speed and while stationary. In addition, the same test is made after the crankshaft is assembled with the flywheel.

These tests, which are carried out under the unusually high requirements standardized throughout Overland factories, demand extremely skillful handling and precision. It is one of the operations responsible for the vibrationless, smooth-running big new Overland engine, handled in the Overland's latest models, by Thomas Plimley & Sons.

Okanagan-Cariboo Trail Opening on Saturday Next

Kelowna, July 19.—An event of importance will be the official opening of an international tourist scenic highway, of the famous Okanagan-Cariboo Trail, which takes place at Kelowna on Saturday, July 26. A basket picnic is being arranged in the beautiful city park by the lake. Those invited to be present include the governors of the states of Washington, Idaho and Oregon. As the association membership includes practically every town and city from Wenatchee to Barkerville, and each promises a good representation, a large crowd is expected.

FRANKLIN CROWNS YEARS' ENDEAVOR

John Wilkinson Realizes Goal Sought Since Early Days of Motors

Syracuse, N.Y., July 19.—Just 22 years to the month from the time that John Wilkinson, vice-president of the Franklin Automobile Company, began work on his first Franklin air-cooled motor, he is offering to the motoring public an engine which marks the attainment of a goal toward which he has been striving for over a fifth of a century.

It is said that Franklin's new high-powered 16-C motor, when considered in connection with the fact that it is air-cooled, marks the greatest motoring advance in years. John Wilkinson built the first four-cylinder, valve-in-head, air-cooled motor in America. Later, he developed the six. For many years, the Franklin Automobile Company has held to the air-cooled field and has accumulated a knowledge of design which has led to results not so long ago considered as beyond attainment by the rank and file of engineers.

The improvements incorporated in the 16-C Franklin motor are the culmination of many years of experimentation and research. They mark the attainment of certain definite things for which John Wilkinson worked—an automobile engine cooled without the use of water, which knows no limitations in cooling efficiency no matter how strenuous the conditions—a motor with power for the steepest hills with speed beyond the possibilities of the modern highway.

In addition, the 16-C motor retains all the smoothness and stamina that made its predecessors famous.

FLINT CAR TO BE BUILT IN CANADA

R. H. Mulch, general manager of the Durant Motors of Canada Limited, makes the interesting announcement that he is perfecting arrangements for the commencement of construction of the Flint six in a few weeks at the Leaside plant of Durant Motors of Canada Limited.

Mr. Mulch reports that the plant of the Flint Motor Co. is turning out over one hundred cars a day for seven days a week, in an endeavor to catch up with orders. This is a pronounced contrast to the general situation in the automobile industry. It gives an indication of the buying tendencies of the motor car purchasers, who, apparently, appreciate the value of new engineering features introduced in certain new cars which have recently been put on the market by established manufacturers who are not hampered by large material commitments and obsolete equipment.

The Chrysler's 3-inch motor delivers 68 horsepower and a speed of 70 miles an hour. Such tremendous power and speed from a motor of such size are unprecedented. Chrysler engineering has produced a practically vibrationless engine with a fuel economy of better than 24 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and a car which rides with greater ease than a two-ton automobile.

But the applications are vastly different and so are the results—so different in every phase that they establish a new point from which all automotive progress is bound to move. Do you remember the thrill your first motor car ride gave you? Several such thrills are in store for you in the Chrysler Six.

The Chrysler Six

You remember the sensation created by the first four-cylinder car. It was a radical departure from the "one-lunger"—especially in results obtained.

The new Chrysler Six presents a similar sensational departure from conventional conceptions of performance. There has been no tampering with tried and true automotive principles. The Chrysler Six hews to the line that experience has established as fundamental.

But the applications are vastly different and so are the results—so different in every phase that they establish a new point from which all automotive progress is bound to move. Do you remember the thrill your first motor car ride gave you? Several such thrills are in store for you in the Chrysler Six.

CHURCH SPLIT FEARED OVER WEDDING RITES

Another Religious Controversy Breaks Out Over Church of England Services

Baptismal, Marriage and Burial Forms Are Repelling,
It is Charged

London, July 19.—Another religious controversy has been started over the Church of England's marriage, baptismal and burial services by the Rev. H. R. L. Sheppard, vicar of St. Martin's-in-the-Field.

Added piquancy is given to the charges and counter charges by the fact that Mr. Sheppard is one of the most modern vicars of the Church of England, whose personality has done much to attract attention to London's "Little Church Around the Corner," where "down and out" shelter any night and where lusty naval hands have blazoned forth at Thanksgiving Day celebrations.

Mr. Sheppard publishes a church magazine, in which he brings his charges. He says the statement in the baptismal service, "inasmuch as all men are conceived and born in sin," is repelling and should be changed, because that cannot be the conception of the father and mother. Of the wedding service he writes: "The service contains a much lower ideal of the relation of the sexes than is held by most right-thinking people to-day, and it is ludicrous to give examples of married life to the patriarchs, who lived in a primitive state of society. There is further a very low conception of women and motherhood."

"The suggestion that the gift of continence is not so much needed after marriage as before," the expression in the Psalm (addressed to the man) that his wife shall be as the fruitful vine on the walls of his house; the phrase that explains that God ordained that man and woman should take her beginning, are all peculiarly distasteful—and what on earth have Abraham and Sarah got to do with the affair?"

Mr. Sheppard gives examples of the "wholly unintelligible" phrases in the burial service and relates how at the burial of a friend "we called her body a vile body. We reminded them that worms would destroy that body—and we thanked God heartily that it had pleased him to deliver the wife, mother and friend from the miseries of this sinful world. All this was intolerable to the officiating minister, and God knows what charges 'cheerful criticism.' But another well known churchman, the Rev. P. R. Clayton, thinks it should not be changed, because it has been hallowed by long use.

Arnold Bennett considers the present marriage service offensive. "It cannot be kept forever as it stands," he says.

Queen Cherishes Her Presents as Loved Treasures

London, July 19.—What happens to all the momentoes and souvenirs that are presented to the queen, is a question often asked but seldom answered. The Weekly Dispatch claims to have ascertained from "some one in a responsible position," however, that these presents are not put away in a store cupboard.

This source of information added: "The Queen is very proud of her collection of souvenirs, and she treasures every one of them. I do not think there is another woman in the world who takes such a keen delight in preserving her momentoes of happy and interesting occasions." The Wembley Exhibition has swelled the Queen's collection considerably, and recent additions include damask and linen, canaries, "Felix" the cat, cards, lace fans and musical instruments.

The Queen makes practical use of her gifts whenever possible. The damask linen presented by the Ulster Linen Trade is in constant use at Buckingham Palace.

LATEST GOSSIP OF OLD LONDON

By Panton House

LONDON, July 4 (By Mail).—This is the great Imperial Season. The Dominions have sent to the Mother Country their most distinguished representatives. Plans are now being completed for the Albert Hall "Heart of London" ball, in aid of the "Dockland Settlements" in the East End of London. These settlements are for the welfare of those who labor in London's great docks. In the romance of this great centre of shipping is wrapped up the foundation of the British Empire. The ball is to be a pageant; each part of the Empire will express itself in dresses which will symbolize the productions of each country. The general idea of the Canadian group will be expressed in wheat, fur and gold, the organization being in the able hands of Lady Kingsmill, wife of the Director of Naval Service, Canada.

LONDON'S TRAFFIC

No less than 11,400,000 passengers were carried by trains, buses and trams controlled by the London Underground Group during the last week-end. On Saturday 6,800,000 passengers were carried, and on Sunday 4,710,000—the latter being a record.

GUESTS OF ROYALTY

Nearly 10,000 guests assembled in the grounds of Buckingham Palace for the garden party on June 25. The feature of the reception was the unusual number of visitors from the Dominions. Glorious sunshine made this function of London's social season a brilliant spectacle. The summer dresses of the women, their picture hats, and their gay sunshades, could have had no better setting than the old shady trees of the garden, with the bright music of the military bands.

The Royal party, including the King and Queen of Denmark, had tea in the famous Indian silk tent with its bamboo poles ornamented with silver. It required mountainous quantities of strawberries and cream, tons of ice and cake, with rivers of cooling drinks to refresh the multitude of guests.

UNIQUE CEREMONY

A ceremony unique in the history of the London home of our royal family was celebrated at Buckingham Palace on June 24. The King, who is the Sovereign Head of the Grand Priory of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, held an investiture for the members of the order. The ceremony was quaint and fascinating, being held in the white and gold ballroom.

The King and Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duchess of York and Lord Lascelles, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Arthur, Princess "Pat," and Princesses Beatrice and Helena Victoria formed some of the royal party. The ceremony started with a procession, among whom were Field-Marshal the Duke of Connaught, who is Grand Prior. After him came the chaplain-general in black cloaks, the sub-priests who are bishops, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, who is Prelate; then the sub-prior, the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Knights of Justice, Knights of Grace, Ladies of Justice and Grace, and finally Honorary Serving Brothers and Sisters. Lovely Indian ladies in gleaming gold tissue and Chinese noblemen added a touch of splendor to the scene.

ENGLISH LIVE STOCK

The influence of the British Empire Exhibition is having a marked effect on this year's show of the Royal Agricultural Society, and the result will be of untold benefit to the industry. Farmers and breeders from all over the Empire have intimated that they will attend. It is mainly to see the stock that such a large number of visitors are coming, as Britain is recognized to be the home of farm live stock. Foreigners have already expressed amazement that the small land of England maintains, distinct and prosperous, so many different breeds.

MAN WHO FIRST BOTTLED BEER

On June 26 honor was given to the memory of the man who first bottled beer successfully for export to all parts of the world. The Vintners' Company, one of the most important of the Ancient Livery Companies of the City of London, gave a dinner in their historic hall to the memory of Benjamin Kenton. In solemn silence the company drank "to the immortal memory of our late brother and benefactor Benjamin Kenton."

Kenton started life as an apprentice, and became a waiter at the Crown and Maigie in Aldgate. He married the daughter of the proprietor of the tavern, prospered, and in 1776 was made Master of the Vintners' Company.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE'S YOUTH

The National Union of Teachers has taken in hand the distribution of school children's tickets to see the Empire Exhibition. Already they have sold 700,000, and orders are still coming in. This is for the children at home only.

For the young people overseas an organization has been started by the "National Union of Students" at the University Union, London, which represents students of every university and university college in England and Wales, for the purpose of raising funds to organize a great conference of students from every part of the Empire. The object of the conference is to focus attention on the enormous wealth and power for good that are latent in the British Empire. The committee of the N.U.S., which contains many prominent Canadians, go to point out:

"The future of the British Empire depends on the manner and spirit in which this power is used by the young men and women of this generation."

WOLFE AND QUEBEC

A further section of the "Townshend Papers" is to be written at Sotheby's on July 14. They contain an important historical letter by Wolfe, dealing with his operations at Quebec in 1759. The letter shows Wolfe's masterly grasp of detail and his high courage and sense of responsibility. It was written to inform you to-day that it is my duty to attack the French army to the best of my knowledge and abilities. I have fixed upon that spot (Tasien) where we can act with most force and are most likely to succeed. If I am mistaken I am sorry for it and must be answerable to His Majesty and the Public for the consequences.

LONDON STATISTICS

Statistics just published show that on July 10, 1923, the number of vehicles that passed Hyde Park Corner between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. was 49,476, more than one a second. This year there are still more. Another figure is interesting. In 1922 only seventy-two cases of smashup were notified in London, while in the five years 1918-20 there were 16,518.

BRAVE KNIGHTS OF ST. JOHN MADE HISTORY

Modern Work is Praised as Order is Officially Recognized by King

Organization Dates Back to 1087 When Crusaders Were Aided by "Poor Brothers"

London, July 19.—The Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England is the oldest order of knighthood in Great Britain. Its history dates without interruption from 1087, when the Crusaders, carrying the Cross of Jerusalem, found established a hospice in charge of "The Poor Brethren of the Hospital of St. John." This undertaking represented the continuation of a hospital foundation which, with some exceptions, had been carried on in Jerusalem since the third century—in fact, ever since Christian pilgrimages to Palestine first began.

The Crusaders, on their triumphant entry into Jerusalem, took the hospital under their patronage. Since that time, or for more than 900 years, the organization has existed uninterrupted. Its first English foundation was established in 1199. Thus those ladies who have recently received from King George in person the honorary titles of "Ladies of Grace of the Order of St. John" have become associated with an order which antedates by at least two centuries the next oldest British one, the Most Noble Order of the Garter, founded in 1349.

KING OFFICIATES AT CEREMONY

When the King officiated personally at the investiture at Buckingham Palace, however, the full cycle of the relations between the British crown and the Order of St. John was completed. Until the time of Henry VIII the order, as a military organization, received the direct patronage of each English sovereign. Its priory church in Clerkenwell, London, was visited by many of the Plantagenet and early Tudor kings; and when in 1565, after having been successfully forced to remove from Malta, the Knights of Rhodes, the knights in their Maltese stronghold were seeking to withstand the attacks of the Turks, Queen Elizabeth issued orders for prayers to be read in every church in England for the success of the knights.

When the break with the Catholic Church came under Henry VIII and the religious houses in England were dissolved, the Priory of the Hospitaliers was the last to be suppressed. Although its charter never was revoked, the order itself became dormant in England. Napoleon's drive out from this land stronghold after a period of several years the surviving knights of the order re-constituted in England. Charles II, then being quite willing that the confederation made by Henry VIII should be forgotten.

The revived order worked industriously, and its status as a peace-time voluntary hospital corps was recognized by Queen Victoria, who renewed and extended its charter. Since then the services of the members of the order have been available for first-aid work wherever it has been necessary. In the South African and Chinese wars more than seventy members of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade (an offshoot of the parent organization) lost their lives, and in the Great War the death roll ran into thousands. During the first week of the war in August, 1914, 4,000 members of the order, already trained in first-aid work, reported for service with the colors. Later in the war the order merged with the Red Cross for co-operation in field work.

To-day the reconciliation between the order and the British Crown is complete. The knights have abandoned their claims to temporal power, and the order has reverted to the work to which, nine centuries ago, it originally was dedicated. Some of the most prominent men and women in England figure as officers of the organization, and there are more than 25,000 trained civilian volunteers on its rolls. Detachments are always to be found where great crowds assemble, and at the present moment there are a number of voluntary ambulance men on hand at the Wembley Exhibition.

Upper Classes Shun Ministry, Bishop of Birmingham Mourns

Birmingham, England, July 19.—The Bishop of Birmingham has expressed his disappointment because there is a decided dropping off in the number of candidates for ordination from the upper classes. Writing to his flock in "The Diocesan Magazine," he says: "We are not getting the sons of our well-to-do people to come forward for ordination as we expect."

"It is true that the clergy are poorly paid," the bishop adds, "and have not great prospects of worldly advancement. But it will be sad indeed if the sense of vocation does not reach down to the masses as a whole. In olden days it was counted a glory by our best families to give at least one boy to the ministry. The clergyman was a Christ, the clergyman may lead in order to be stirred to the sacrifice of their lives to the evangelizing and edifying of God's people."

Glories of Empire Lead But to Dust and Ashes— So Reflects Alexandra Awaiting Final Trumpet

HAS HAD MARVELOUS CAREER

LONDON, July 19 (Special dispatch to The Victoria Times).—In her eightieth year and feeling that she is very close to the grave, Queen Alexandra, mother of the present King of England, has gone into practical retirement in her palace at Sandringham, London—ever loyal and loving to her—will know her no more.

And this has made a special impression, because the other day—Alexandra Day—for the first time in over forty years, the Dowager Queen failed to drive through the city, while an army of maids and matrons sold roses for the benefit of her pet charity—the public hospitals. The aged queen's slight is dimming. She is very deaf and quite lame. The rest of her life will be a sort of dying, a waiting for the end, while she dreams over her marvelous career, perhaps something like this: "1554—Ten years old. Was I ever so young as ten? Seems almost impossible. And yet I remember my happy, happy childhood when father was merely the poor heir to a poor little Danish throne. I remember I dreamed of the fairy prince who was to lead me to unimaginable glories. And the greatest glory was to be love—love of my husband, love of my people."

"1863—Nineteen and the papers and the poets said I was supremely lovely—as beautiful as a princess ought to be. England's great poet, Tennyson, sang of me as 'the people's choice.' It comes back to me now—my arrival in England with my father and mother for my wedding day—my wonderful reception by the people of London, with all the joy-bells ringing and countless tens of thousands cheering me as we drove through the packed and beflagged streets—my fright of the great Queen Victoria and her kindly reception of me—the chivalrous tenderness of my husband-to-be—Edward, Prince of Wales."

"1869—Twenty-five—a mother—the laughter and the calls of children making the palace a real home—something to come back to after the glitter and the boredom of state balls and functions—something earnest and real—we George with his mashed finger which I must kiss to make well—and Louise wanting to be petted."

"1901—Fifty-seven. The wonderful queen, who ruled so long and so wisely is dead. Never since a career before me such mourning as I have seen in the streets of London—flags at half mast—crepe on the houses—bells seemingly by thousands tolling their mournful lay—streets crowded with people from the four corners of the world, talking in hushed tones as if they feared to disturb the slumbers of the great dead."

"1902—Fifty-eight. What a contrast to last year! Now London is all a glory of flags and flowers. The streets are brilliant with soldiers and potpourris from all over the globe. Hands are crashing into patriotic salutes. Bells are booming joyously. Edward, my husband, has this day been crowned King of England and I his Queen Consort in time-hallowed Westminster Abbey. I feel very humble. I hope we will deserve the cheers that greet us."

"1910—Sixty-two and a widow. They have laid my husband to rest. I have sent a message to Parliament thanking the members for their message of condolence. In all truth I have said it was balm for my broken heart. I meant it. I hope it will silence the slander tongues which loved to spread reports that I was a neglected wife."

"1924—Seventy-nine and very lonely. I have just lost my oldest and best friend—General Dighton Probyn, who for fifty years faithfully served my husband and me. Through my tears I have just written a card to go with the wreath I am sending to place on his coffin: 'For my beloved General Probyn, with thanks for all he has been to me all these years—fifty-two years. We shall miss him so much; but he will draw us up to Heaven, where he is sure to go. God bless. From his devoted Alexandra.'"

"I am ready to go. No one needs me now. My son, growing gray himself, a grandfather, has his own duties and responsibilities to preoccupy him. My favorite grandson, my horses that I have always loved—and my gardens—and a few more days—and then rest. Yes—rest. That is good. Life becomes a great weariness—most things seem dead. Sea fruit—dust and ashes..."

"For my beloved General Probyn, with thanks for all he has been to me all these years—fifty-two years. We shall miss him so much; but he will draw us up to Heaven, where he is sure to go. God bless. From his devoted Alexandra."

"The response has been prompt and overwhelming. So much so that the 'movie' man has fled to Liverpool to escape the attentions of the would-be Harold Lloyds. Despite his departure, there is an increasing number of Londoners who believe one look at their faces would convince the world's cinema audiences."

The London papers which announced the arrival of the "movie" scout have had to make the would-be comedians to refrain from writing to ask where the producer's representative can be found.

King and Dawes
Toasted Together

London, July 19.—King George and Brigadier-General Charles G. Dawes shared honors in the only toast given at the British Government's official dinner to the delegates to the Inter-allied Conference at Lancaster House last night. After the last course had been served, Premier MacDonald arose and gave the traditional British toast to His Majesty. He then announced that there would be no speeches and after a few moments of conversation among the officers, the French Premier, M. Herriot, rose and proposed a toast to General Dawes, which was received enthusiastically.

London, July 19.—In Britain political campaigns are almost a continuous performance because of the habit of Cabinet Ministers, other prominent members of the Government in office, important leaders of opposition parties and many lesser lights, of using their spare time, to expound their views.

This is much more prevalent here because shore distances make constituencies accessible and because of the love of the people generally for politics along old-fashioned lines.

None of the older men in political life, however, can remember when there was so much between-elections campaigning as now. Never before has there been such intensive campaigning, except just preceding a general election. It is simply a question of every party making a tremendous appeal to the people for an election that is bound to come because the Socialist minority Government cannot carry on indefinitely.

LIBERALS MOST ACTIVE

The Liberal Party, because of its weakened condition, and because Lloyd George's activity on the platform, is furnishing the chief spectacle. Great Liberal rallies are being held by the former Premier, and thousands cheer him as he denounces the Labor Government, which his party by sheer force of circumstances is compelled to support in Parliament.

Liberals know an election at this time would be fatal to their cause. They are trying to rally the people around the old Liberal standard and have held as many as 450 meetings in one week.

The Conservatives, whose organization was very badly shattered by their defeat at the last election, are going about the thing in a much quieter manner, and for the present are centering their energies on the very young voters, or those who may vote within a year.

They are preaching to them what the leaders believe are the perils of socialism and evidently endeavoring to build up a solid party organization for the future as well as for their needs at the next election.

THE BIG APPEAL FOR WOMEN

VOTES

The Conservatives as well as the Liberals are appealing to young womanhood, because the parties in the present Parliament are under verbal agreement to enfranchise at this session 4,500,000 women at the age of twenty-one. Labor believes it will get the bulk of these votes. The Labor Party is also very active, principally in further strengthening of its very strong organization throughout the country.

The Laborites just now are not given to oratory any more than that usually expected from members of the Government. Neutral political observers think the Labor Party, since the fact that it is in office is for the moment in much the strongest position. No one wants a general election now any more than four months ago, consequently the other side are waiting for MacDonald drift along until the party fences can be repaired.

The frequent defeats of the Government in Commons, the coming of the huge jokers, the seventh setback came on a vote on an amendment to the finance bill, and it is stated that this is the first time in English parliamentary history that a Government failed to resign when defeated on any proposition it had put forward in its budget.

LABOR LAUGHS AT DEFEAT

But no one seemed to care. Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden actually laughed when the vote was announced, and Premier MacDonald smiled as he rarely does in his seat on the front bench. It didn't cause a ripple among the members, though the action deprived the Chancellor of the Exchequer of £500,000. He hopes, however, to have the item reinserted during later action on the budget.

When Mr. MacDonald went into office he announced that his Government would not resign when defeated upon minor issues, but provisions in the finance bill, always have been considered very important measures, consequently it is evident that the Government doesn't expect to get out except when beaten on a direct vote of no confidence. Of course, that would mean a general election, and as no one wants that now a vote of no confidence certainly is not in prospect. In the meantime the Socialist Government will drift along, while the other parties work feverishly to strengthen their forces until they think they are strong enough to take a chance on turning out MacDonald.

to Force Issue Until Lines Are Strengthened

London, July 19.—In Britain political campaigns are almost a continuous performance because of the habit of Cabinet Ministers, other prominent members of the Government in office, important leaders of opposition parties and many lesser lights, of using their spare time, to expound their views.

This is much more prevalent here because shore distances make constituencies accessible and because of the love of the people generally for politics along old-fashioned lines.

None of the older men in political life, however, can remember when there was so much between-elections campaigning as now. Never before has there been such intensive campaigning, except just preceding a general election. It is simply a question of every party making a tremendous appeal to the people for an election that is bound to come because the Socialist minority Government cannot carry on indefinitely.

LIBERALS MOST ACTIVE

The Liberal Party, because of its weakened condition, and because Lloyd George's activity on the platform, is furnishing the chief spectacle. Great Liberal rallies are being held by the former Premier, and thousands cheer him as he denounces the Labor Government, which his party by sheer force of circumstances is compelled to support in Parliament.

Liberals know an election at this time would be fatal to their cause. They are trying to rally the people around the old Liberal standard and have held as many as 450 meetings in one week.

The Conservatives, whose organization was very badly shattered by their defeat at the last election, are going about the thing in a much quieter manner, and for the present are centering their energies on the very young voters, or those who may vote within a year.

They are preaching to them what the leaders believe are the perils of socialism and evidently endeavoring to build up a solid party organization for the future as well as for their needs at the next election.

THE BIG APPEAL FOR WOMEN

VOTES

The Conservatives as well as the Liberals are appealing to young womanhood, because the parties in the present Parliament are under verbal agreement to enfranchise at this session 4,500,000 women at the age of twenty-one. Labor believes it will get the bulk of these votes. The Labor Party is also very active, principally in further strengthening of its very strong organization throughout the country.

The Laborites just now are not given to oratory any more than that usually expected from members of the Government. Neutral political observers think the Labor Party, since the fact that it is in office is for the moment in much the strongest position. No one wants a general election now any more than four months ago, consequently the other side are waiting for MacDonald drift along until the party fences can be repaired.

The frequent defeats of the Government in Commons, the coming of the huge jokers, the seventh setback came on a vote on an amendment to the finance bill, and it is stated that this is the first time in English parliamentary history that a Government failed to resign when defeated on any proposition it had put forward in its budget.

LABOR LAUGHS AT DEFEAT

But no one seemed to care. Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden actually laughed when the vote was announced, and Premier MacDonald smiled as he rarely does in his seat on the front bench. It didn't cause a ripple among the members, though the action deprived the Chancellor of the Exchequer of £500,000. He hopes, however, to have the item reinserted during later action on the budget.

When Mr. MacDonald went into office he announced that his Government would not resign when defeated upon minor issues, but provisions in the finance bill, always have been considered very important measures, consequently it is evident that the Government doesn't expect to get out except when beaten on a direct vote of no confidence. Of course, that would mean a general election, and as no one wants that now a vote of no confidence certainly is not in prospect. In the meantime the Socialist Government will drift along, while the other parties work feverishly to strengthen their forces until they think they are strong enough to take a chance on turning out MacDonald.

London, July 19.—King George and Brigadier-General Charles G. Dawes shared honors in the only toast given at the British Government's official dinner to the delegates to the Inter-allied Conference at Lancaster House last night. After the last course had been served, Premier MacDonald arose and gave the traditional British toast to His Majesty. He then announced that there would be no speeches and after a few moments of conversation among the officers, the French Premier, M. Herriot, rose and proposed a toast to General Dawes, which was received enthusiastically.

By WILLIAM TRANT

Noted International Journalist of the Last Half of Last Century and Now a Resident of Victoria

THE day after the search in the palace Mr. Jefferson, of Jefferson and Payne (the Gaekwar's legal advisers) arrived at Baroda. He came to arrange the means for the defence of Mulharao. The Government had promised ample funds for the purpose but were somewhat staggered when Mr. Jefferson asked for sufficient money to bring out counsel from England. After considerable bickering, however, consent was given.

I was well acquainted with Mr. Jefferson and we passed our time together. Sir Lewis Pelly did not like this because, according to him, I had the "eye of a hawk and the scent of a hound" which, as a newspaper man, I ought to regard as a compliment.

Mr. Jefferson and I fully discussed what lawyer should be retained. I strongly urged Sergeant Ballantine, having had much practical observation of his skill as a cross-examiner, and thought this ability would be of great value in the sort of case that was being brought against his Highness.

Mr. Jefferson, however, thought otherwise, his favorite being Mr. Henry Hawkins. That distinguished advocate, therefore, was offered a "retainer" of £5,000 a month, plus extra which it was estimated would make a total amount of about £10,000.

LAWYER'S WAY OF REFUSING

Mr. Hawkins, however, asked £50,000 for three months; that is, two months on the sea, going and coming, and one month in India, the time it was estimated the proceedings would occupy.

It was recognized that Mr. Hawkins was never expected to receive so large an amount. The fixing of such a fee was only a polite way of declining the offer. Many barristers exercise a sort of etiquette which refuses them never positively to refuse a brief, and when unwilling to accept they impose such pecuniary restrictions as are prohibitive.

My nominee, Sergeant Ballantine, was therefore approached, and accepted the offer of a retainer of £5,000 which, with "refreshers," "reminders" and the other polite designs that lawyers have for their payments, amounted to £290 a day for the twenty days that the enquiry lasted so that "the dashing young sergeant of seventy," as the greffo would call him, had no reason to regret his trip to India, especially also as his expenses to and from India were paid in addition to the sums above indicated.

Thanks to the telegraph the retainer and expenses were dispatched without a moment's delay. I saw Sergeant Ballantine's retainer lowered thirty-seven bags by a crane at one of the windows of the treasury and conveyed to the railway station in five bullock carts. They were then put on a train and dispatched to the Queen's Hotel. The telegraph did the rest and at the same time a messenger with the brief was sent to Aden to intercept the great lawyer on his outward voyage. He had thus a week at sea to study the case and needed no coaching when he arrived at Bombay.

SACRED COW SUPERSTITIONS

The natives of Baroda State were wonderfully pleased when they heard that a great lawyer was coming from England to guard the interest of their prince. They thought he had been sent by the Queen. The incident was made the occasion for an outburst of loyalty to Mulharao.

With the Oriental the doctrine that the King can do no wrong is accepted literally and the idea never entered the heads of the inhabitants of the State of Baroda that the grievous wrongs under which they suffered, the heavy burdens they bore, the industrial galore and oppression they endured, was the work of their sacred sovereign. Far more likely, they thought such troubles arose from the practice of the English in the matter of the sacred cow. The divinity that does hedge a king is with them a staunch fact. Resolutions, petitions, illuminations and everywhere galore and preparations were made to receive the lawyer in regal style.

There was no hall in Baroda in which the enquiry could be held. But this was a trifling matter to a man of such resourceful energy as Sir Lewis Pelly-Jl Gaekwar. There was an abundance of men and of material. All that was necessary was to bring the two together, and while the great crowd was on the blue tumbling waves of the sea a chamber of goodly proportions arose on the maiden of the Residency.

"TRIAL" OF POTENTATE

Due regard had to be paid to the delicacy of the situation. A prince who had not been arrested but had given himself up, who was not a prisoner but merely the guest of a custodian, could not of course be placed in dock. There was not to be a "trial," merely a commission of enquiry. Mulharao, therefore, must sit on the dais, with the Commissioners and oppositely to him, not his accuser, but his "friend" who was conducting the enquiry—Sir Lewis Pelly, the representative of the Queen. Next to him was to sit Mr. Jardine, secretary of the Commission, whose Northumbrian burr when the commission was in session caused considerable amusement, so often had he said "Mulharao Gaekwar of Baroda."

While Sergeant Ballantine was delighting the company on board the O. O. steamer for he was ever entertaining in whatever company Providence happened to place him, and while the hall of justice palace of inquiry was in course of construction, Sir Lewis Pelly was good enough to exercise his Gaekwar authority by inviting us to a hunt with the Gaekwar's cheetahs.

We, I mean, the English, looked forward to this sport with much interest as few, if any, had ever before assisted at such entertainment. We were glad, therefore, when the cheetahs came and we were commanded to assemble at dawn. There is something inexplicably pleasant in a fine Indian morning. At any rate, I thought so when at daybreak a morn of the Residency to join in the Cheetah Hunt. The cool wind freshened one up and the coming day seemed to cast a new glow over the scene. The tents at the camp appeared whiter, the leaves on the trees greener, the air clearer than usual when an expectancy sharpens the senses and a hope of good things to come puts one in a good temper with everything and everybody.

OFF FOR THE CHEETAH HUNT

As the sun, red with joy, showed his face ten thousand ways, ten thousand objects began to show in fulness of life, animation and vigor beyond their wont, and with a more could well feel the force of good Master Herbert's beautiful metaphor when he compared such a well-lit morning to a "day of the earth and sky."

Everyone seemed determined on enjoyment, and what with the witchery of the soft blue heaven and the natural gaiety of the occasion, left the Residency for the deer preserves of His Highness the Gaekwar. The bright red liveries of the servants, the well-dressed men, the elegant costumes of the ladies and the general exultation of the whole affair made a gay cortege that scamped over the hills and far away. The party consisted of the ladies and gentlemen of the Residency circle and the ladies and gentlemen of the Garrison. Only visitors from outside were Mr.

Eustace Smith (then M.P. for Tynemouth) and Mr. Smith. A drive of a few miles along a pleasant though dusty road, brought us to Muckinpoor Palace, the country residence of the Gaekwar. Here we left the main road, took a cut across country for a few miles and arrived at the hunting bungalow of His Highness. This was pleasantly situated at the foot of a small hill, on ascending which we found eight camels and twenty-four bullock carts waiting our arrival. Eight of the carts contained each one cheetah, or hunting leopard, blindfolded with leather blinkers and secured by a rope. The remaining carts were to carry the party. These humble vehicles were necessary to give a rural and unassuming appearance to the caravan, a make-belief that we were a party of peasants going to market, a scene with which the Gaekwar was familiar. It would have been fatal to the sport to have alarmed the timidity of the gentle creatures, who would have scampered away at any unaccustomed sight. As we were all eager for the sport no time was lost in assuming our places. Off we set in a long procession to the hunting field, leaving only the camels behind.

ROUGH GOING

Huntmen capered about on horse-back, a few persons accompanied us on foot and altogether the party was upwards of a hundred strong. Across the country we went in a rickety rolling way (I mean the vehicles, which shook us terribly) respecting neither cultivation nor landmark. We crossed a cotton field, then a less fertile tramping down the plants for a mile or two in a way that would have bowed with grief the heart of a Manchester merchant who had, however, ample reason in our suffering. No one except those who had experienced it can imagine the jostling and shaking which seems necessary to undergo when hunting with the cheetah. We were away from all roads and the manner in which we were jerked to the top of our heads and thrown down again, then backward, bruising one all over the body, was indeed terrible; to which must be added that we were none of us on seats (there were none), but squatted in as near the native style as we could persuade our limbs to assume.

Naturally in a journey of some miles in this way all attempts to believe that we were amused, or to persuade ourselves that it was enjoyable, were an entire and dismal failure. Even the most charitable regarded the adventure as a cruel practical joke; and it certainly was a specimen of torture which one might well imagine Mulharao had devised for shaking to pieces Sir Lewis Pelly and his gang of persecutors.

AFTER THE FIRST BUCK

However, as we were informed that we should have that sort of thing to endure during the whole of the hunt, we did the best we could to prove to ourselves that it was really nothing unpleasant at all but, everything considered, as positively jolly as Mark Tapley could have wished. On nearing the portion of the preserve where the hunters knew that deer were plentiful the cavalcade divided in two.

In a short time after the temporary separation of friends, the section of which I was a member came up to a small herd, whose antlers were just visible above the long grass through which they were traveling. We were not long in getting ready to begin sport. The blinkers were removed from a cheetah and he was slipped. As soon as he saw the prey he gave no intimation beyond quietly dropping down on the ground and crouching; then with a few paces he was out of sight in the jungle. In less than a minute dust arose and a cry of "puckered" announced that the cheetah had struck his quarry.

We left our clumsy vehicles and rushed to the spot. Here we found a fine buck with horns twenty-two inches long. The cheetah had seized him by the throat, where as Mark Tapley would have said, "he'd got him." He was certainly enjoying a deep draught of the flowing ruby when we came up and showed no signs of alarm. As we were all eager for the sport no time was lost in assuming our places. Off we set in a long procession to the hunting field, leaving only the camels behind.

CHASING UP THE HERD

The consternation into which the herd had been thrown by the appearance of their spotted foe was but temporary. Their first impulse was to disperse, and the cheetahs, as with which these ill-limbed animals scampered in every direction as soon as danger was discovered was a very pretty sight. A snort, however, barked again and in a short time we were nearing not only those who had disturbed but a huge pack of over a thousand head. Again a cheetah was slipped. There came the same crouching bound, the same hold on the hind-quarters, the roll in the dust. The cry "puckered" arose once more and in a moment a second buck was added to the spoils.

This was all very well as a matter of slaughter, but it was hardly the sort of sport to suit gentlemen from England (to say nothing of ladies) who had followed the hounds in Leicestershire or hunted deer in Scotland. To the English the hunt was false pretences and when close upon it to let loose a spotted leopard when there was little or no chance of escape was hardly the sort of sport to suit gentlemen from England. It was not until we were well away from the scene that we began to feel that the hunt was a cruel practical joke; and it certainly was a specimen of torture which one might well imagine Mulharao had devised for shaking to pieces Sir Lewis Pelly and his gang of persecutors.

These stories, I repeat, may now be properly narrated in the Summer of 1924. By the way, as all fishermen know, the true time to tell them is around the Winter fire, with a glass of something warm within easy reach, at a time when statements cannot be checked, when weights and measures must be challenged, and when the growl to their full size and their true beauty. It is to such stories as these, whether told in Summer or in Winter, that the immortal craft of the continued charm.

GETTING A DOE

We were more successful, however, in our next attempt. A cheetah of whose power we had already had proof was slipped as soon as a herd of does appeared. The cheetah was in a moment the long lanky leopard was on the ground, crouching step by step until his intended victim was within his grasp. He was not long in getting ready to begin sport. The blinkers were removed from a cheetah and he was slipped. As soon as he saw the prey he gave no intimation beyond quietly dropping down on the ground and crouching; then with a few paces he was out of sight in the jungle. In less than a minute dust arose and a cry of "puckered" announced that the cheetah had struck his quarry.

Another refusal and another fine run completed our morning's sport. The cheetahs were not long in getting ready to begin sport. The blinkers were removed from a cheetah and he was slipped. As soon as he saw the prey he gave no intimation beyond quietly dropping down on the ground and crouching; then with a few paces he was out of sight in the jungle. In less than a minute dust arose and a cry of "puckered" announced that the cheetah had struck his quarry.

"PRETTY" OR CRUEL SPORT?

Some persons style the sport "pretty," others cruel. It has the character of most oriental sports, viz.: those who assist do so in the sense of "assisting" at public meetings in France. They are merely present and look on. Of purely Indian sports, with the exception of polo, there are no sports which give enjoyment in its simply watching. Tiger shooting and elephant hunting are not Indian sports. They are the sports of Rajahs. Such sports as Europeans try themselves out and pour with perspiration (with dancing for instance) to pay persons to do these things for the enjoyment of watching them. The same as regards Badminton, lawn tennis, and other sports which are popular with ladies and gentlemen who can afford to pay persons to exert themselves for their delight should prefer to do the thing themselves. Doubtless there are climatic reasons for the lackadaisicalness, though the western hemisphere is following the example of the tropical orient. Are there not cities in Canada and the United States who hire baseball players for their delight, and imagine themselves sportsmen and gentlemen with enthusiasm at the pitching and batting of their hirelings?

On the way back to Baroda I had a scamper through the Muckinpoor Palace. Its principal feature was chandeliers. In one room I counted thirty chandeliers of cut glass, each of which was valued at a hundred rupees. In the same room there were sixty smaller lights. The apartment was furnished with the usual furniture of a common furniture—splendid silk-cushioned chairs alternating with cottagers' cane-bottomed bedroom suites—all in a very haphazard manner. This is a favorite method with the oriental in his interviews with commercial travelers from England.

A DESERTED HUSBAND

On arriving at my abode I found a strange visitor awaiting me. It was a cheetah, and I was not long in getting ready to begin sport. The blinkers were removed from a cheetah and he was slipped. As soon as he saw the prey he gave no intimation beyond quietly dropping down on the ground and crouching; then with a few paces he was out of sight in the jungle. In less than a minute dust arose and a cry of "puckered" announced that the cheetah had struck his quarry.

sovereign like Mulharao. In a short time Mulharao left her husband for the Gaekwar. Pandorao had such faith in a Surat Magistrate's warrant that he firmly believed that Mulharao would yet have to answer charge of wife stealing in the court of that town.

MADE QUEEN, NOT CONCUBINE

The luckless wight considered that he was in an unfortunate dilemma. He was anxious to become a Christian, but he was in trouble because the missionary would not baptize him until he had two wives. He might naturally be supposed, therefore, that he considered he owed a debt of gratitude to Mulharao for having removed the obstacle to his conversion and baptism especially as Mulharao's fascination for the cotton spinner compelled him to make her his queen and not (as he might have done) his concubine. But on the latter point he found that he had lost caste, and could only be restored to his position among his fellow men by the recovery of his wife. He was therefore, in a case with all the vigor of which he was capable—which was not much—and was determined he said to secure the service of Sergeant Ballantine on his behalf. But he was confident there were bankers who would advance him any sum of money to assist him in his pursuit. When Mulharao was taken from him she left behind Rs. 2,000 of her ill-earned money, but Pandorao had already spent that among the lawyers in vain attempts to obtain his rights. A peculiar feature in the romance is that, as the Gaekwar was of the same caste as Pandorao and Luxmeeshae, the last named was not considered faithless in having left an artisan for a prince.

HIGH ESTEEM OF NEWSPAPERMEN

There were however, other motives which weighed with the cotton worker. He was well as the Hindu mentioned. He said that he was offered one and a half lakhs of rupees as compensation for the injuries done to him by the loss of his wife, but that he was advised that if he refused this offer and endeavored, he would not only get lakhs for his wife but would also have Luxmeeshae restored to him. I am afraid that by grasping at too much he lost all.

I believe the poor fellow thought that at the time he was giving me these particulars that I was in a position to help him, as he continually clasped his hands and wished me to do so. The average Hindu believes that an English newspaper man is ever the power behind the throne and can do everything. He promised me two rupees for a story, and I showed him a newspaper article that he could get back his wife and be restored to caste, even if he could not become a Christian. He spoke kindly to the poor fellow and he paid me what he considered a great compliment, viz.: "that I was like his father," and said that out of respect for the loss of his wife he was going to the doorsteps of my residence, and I am bound to add that in this respect he truly kept his word.

METHUSALEH'S FISH STORIES

A Reel of Those Tried and True Narrations Which Have Survived the Passing of Ages and the Fall of Empires

The Summer fishing season is now well under way. It has come to me that it might be of use to set down a few of the more-familiar fish stories that are needed by any one wanting to qualify as an angler. There is no copyright in a fish story, since Methusaleh first told them. Anybody who wishes may learn them and make free use of them.

I will begin with the simplest and best known. It is called:

THE STORY OF THE FISH THAT WAS LOST

The circumstances under which the story is best told are these. The fisherman returns after his day's outing with two friends. They carry with them the paraphernalia of their profession. The fisherman carries also on a string a dirty looking little collection called by courtesy "Catch." Among these fish really measures more than about seven and a half inches long and four inches round the chest.

The fisherman's wife and his wife's sister and the young lady who is staying with them come running to meet the fishing party, giving cries of admiration. In reality they would refuse those specimens from a butcher at a cent and a half a pound. But they fall into ecstasies and they cry, "Oh, aren't they beautiful! Look at this big one!" The "big one" is eight inches long; at least, it was when they caught it but it has been shriveling ever since. Then it is that the fishermen say, in a voice in which regret is mingled with animation:

"Yes, but say, you ought to have seen the one we lost. We had hardly let down our lines—"

But it may be interjected here that all fishermen ought to realize that the moment of danger is just when you let down your line. That is the moment when the fish will put up all kinds of game on you, such as rushing at you in a compact way, fast that you can't take them in, or selecting the largest of their number to smash away one of your rods.

"We had hardly let down our lines," says the fisherman, "when Tom got a perfect monster. That fish would have weighed five pounds—wouldn't it?"

"Easily," says Tom.

"Well, Tom, just for haul him in and he yelled to Ted and me to get the landing net ready and we had him right up to the boat, right up to the very boat."

"Right up to the boat," repeated Tom and Edward easily. "When the line broke off and the nibble has turned out to be a bottom" as all nibblers are the moment would be fitting for anyone to tell the famous story called:

BEGINNER'S LUCK, OR THE WONDERFUL CATCH MADE BY THE NARRATOR'S WIFE'S LADY FRIEND

"Talking of that big catch that you made with the pants button," says another of the anglers, who really means that he is going to talk of something else—"

"Reminds me of a queer thing I saw myself. We'd gone out fishing for pickerel, 'Fore we call them up there in the lake of the Two Mountains. We had a couple of big row boats and we'd taken along my wife and the ladies along—I think there were eight of us, or nine, perhaps. Anyway it doesn't matter what the number is, we were there from Dayton, Ohio, and she'd never fished before, in fact she'd never been in a boat before. I don't believe she'd ever been near the water before."

All experienced fishermen know now what is coming. Observe the geographical position of Dayton, Ohio, far from the water and shut in everywhere by land. Any prudent fisher would make and save for shelter if he knew that a young lady from Dayton, Ohio, was after him.

"Well, this girl got an idea that she'd like to fish and we'd rigged up a line for her just tied on to cedar pole that we cut in the bush. Do you know you'd hardly believe that girl had hardly got her line into the water when she got a monster. We yelled to her to play it or she'd lose it, but she just heaved it up into the air and right into the boat. She caught seventeen or twenty—seven, I forget which, one after the other, and the fun of it was she didn't know anything about fishing, she just threw the fish up into the air and into the boat. Next day we got her

I may say with truth that I have heard this story told not only about a girl from Dayton, Ohio, but about a girl from Kansas, a young lady just out from England, about a girl fresh from Paris, and about another girl, not fresh—the daughter of a minister. In fact if I wished to make sure of a real catch, I would select a girl from Paris or New York and cut off some buttons and start to fish.

THE STORY OF WHAT WAS FOUND IN THE FISH

The fishermen have landed on the rocky shore beside the rushing water and are cleaning their fish. There is an obstinate superstition that fish cooked thus taste better than first class kippered herring put

"She caught seventeen or twenty—seven, I forget which, one after the other, and the fun of it was she didn't know anything about fishing, she just threw the fish up into the air and into the boat. Next day we got her up in tin in Aberdeen where they know how. What is more, all the Summer she still maintains a flow of clear water along its stony bed. Here the C.N.R. appears, coming from Mitchinson and winding round the steep slope of Horse Hill. All along H.C. course are extensive rock cuts, ready-made rock sections for the geologist. The effect of the earth's crust is shown in the picture of the intrusion of the gabbro from below is well shown in this section. The greenish rocks have lost much of their original structure through the intense physical and chemical changes to which they have been subjected. Their massive character has been replaced by a slaty or schistose structure and form. This has made them easily broken, especially along the lines of schistosity or parting. The new surfaces which have thus been formed in the rock gleam and shine with a mineral, the result of the chemical changes which have resulted from the physical ones. It is schistosity, a slaty or schistose structure, and mica is a close neighbor of the mica which resembles in its general form and color the mica of the local rocks. It is formed from the breakdown of the original minerals of the rocks, feldspar and augite, the latter containing silica, lime, magnesia, iron and alumina. So that the chlorite resembles the original minerals under a new form. One effect of the present weakened condition of the rocks is that they are comparatively easily broken, but they have the corresponding fault of a tendency to slide. This is increased where the cleavage of the rocks has led to the formation of an overhanging wall on one side. Where a cut has been made one side may show a smooth surface, but on the other a broken, irregular wall which from its dross grained character tends constantly to break away and so cause that troublesome feature of the road, landslides.

AMONG THE GREENSTONES

Passing through the woods and through the brake that grows in their shade, higher than one's head, we turn abruptly up the hillside to cross a little burn which splits the forest and still maintains a flow of clear water along its stony bed. Here the C.N.R. appears, coming from Mitchinson and winding round the steep slope of Horse Hill. All along H.C. course are extensive rock cuts, ready-made rock sections for the geologist. The effect of the earth's crust is shown in the picture of the intrusion of the gabbro from below is well shown in this section. The greenish rocks have lost much of their original structure through the intense physical and chemical changes to which they have been subjected. Their massive character has been replaced by a slaty or schistose structure and form. This has made them easily broken, especially along the lines of schistosity or parting. Beyond Glen Rose, at the head of Pedder Bay, there is a low and almost invisible watershed, for the valley above while the picturesque farmstead stands extends through the Bay to the shores of Sooke Bay. The watershed is a low ridge of earth level. On the north side a stream falls, dry at the time of our visit, rapidly towards the sea. Normally it bears the waters from the valley between Mts. Binkhorn and Redflag. Passing down its stony bed, where flourished great groves of nettles, well over one's head, we end eventually on a little flat by the lake, rich with lush herbage. The lake itself was invisible, though the waters of the edge were based on the grassy slope. Inside the dense thicket of great willows surrounding its outline. The air, warm and moist, was impregnated with the pungent odor of the Hedge Nettles which, with the Swamp Butters, formed the remaining flowers of Summer. A little back from the edge a lovely bank of new white Everlastings lifted their heads, unsullied in this quiet spot by the time the place had been trampled enough. Here were the ruins of old cabins, broken-down enclosures and the cribbed and confined waters of an old bed and a few leaves of timber and a slight sprinkling of some of our common weeds were other accented tokens of human occupation and the presence of man's ancient helper, the horse. Further on the railroad runs along the lake, parallel to it but above it. Its length is about three quarters of a mile and its width a quarter. On the southern side Mount Matheson rises up to a height of a thousand feet, a bare, jagged, and somewhat precipitous towards the lake. The forest on the acclivity is scant enough from the activity of fire and of the lumbering. Blasted spires remain of the former, the innumerable logs that line the shore of the latter. At an open place we descended the bank, the water's edge, but no beach, no approaching a beach or shore was none, only swaying reeds, low bushes and the inevitable logs. Following a path we came to a point a little further on where a fine shower of basalt threw itself across our way. By its side lay a stream of broken rock, not the result of nature's operation, but of the railway construction gangs. Here we lunched in an almost unbroken silence so far as birds and beasts were concerned. Across the surface of the lake a few swallows flew, now high, now low and occasionally from the first came the faint twitter of a bird.

CHILD'S STORY OF THE HUMAN RACE By Uncle Ray

ZEUS, KING OF THE GODS

Zeus was the son of Cronus, the god of time. Old Cronus had been very mean to him and his brothers, but they got together and drove their father out of Greece.

Zeus was married more than once. His first wife was Metis. She helped him against Cronus. Later he married a goddess named Hera. She was very good-looking, but had a jealous nature. That was unlucky for Zeus. He was not a good husband. He had love affairs with quite a few goddesses and beautiful women. Whenever Hera heard of such an affair, she grew hot with rage. Sometimes she took it out by scolding Zeus, but more often she tried to get revenge upon the person who caught his fancy. The Greeks declared that in some cases Zeus took the form of an eagle. An old Greek picture shows Zeus as an eagle bearing a pretty maiden up to Heaven. The maiden had been picking flowers on a mountain side. Zeus, flying overhead, saw her and liked her looks. So he came down and persuaded her to let him carry her away.

HOW HERA OUTWITTED ZEUS
Poor jealous Hera! Her life must have been one fit of anger after another. The pretty damels and nymphs with whom Zeus flirted were almost without number. On one occasion, however, the goddess outwitted her husband.

Zeus was paying his attention to a beautiful young priestess named Io. Afraid that his wife might see, he cano ashes. The Greeks did not know that. The facts about the earlier ages were hidden from them, and you remember that the first use of fire goes way back in history.

The Greeks, however, were active-minded people. They invented a story to explain how man got fire. This story was bound up with stories about the earliest men. One tale says people were living before Zeus became king of the gods. A better-known story says that men were created by two giants who had been friendly to the gods during the war. Let us hear that story.

Prometheus, a good-hearted giant, and his brother were told to create birds, beasts and men. Prometheus let his brother make the birds and beasts. The brother was a careless fellow. He gave away too many gifts to the beasts and birds—swiftness, wings, strength, boldness and so on.

"What have you left for man?" asked Prometheus.

"Why I've given away all the main things," returned the brother giant. "Something must be done," said Prometheus. "I'll try to get fire for him."

Zeus had forbidden fire to be taken from heaven. It was supposed to be sacred to the gods. The noble giant, however, was unwilling to let the man created from clay and water suffer because he was weak. So he went up to heaven and lighted a torch near the sun. Bringing the torch back to earth, he gave it to the first man.

For doing that, Prometheus was harshly punished. He was fastened to a great boulder near a mountain peak. A vulture came around each day and sank its beak cruelly into his flesh; but Prometheus bore his pain without anger. He knew he had done something fine for mankind.

PANDORA'S BOX
The Greeks said the first woman had been made in heaven. They spoke of her as Pandora, which means "all-gifted." When she was created each god gave her a different gift. Apollo gave her musical ability. Aphrodite gave her beauty, and from other gods she also received valuable things.

Pandora was sent to earth. Prometheus, the giant who had given fire to man, was bound on a mountain peak, but his brother received the first woman into his house.

The gods, says one Greek story, had given Pandora a box full of wedding presents. Each present was a blessing. Pandora was not supposed to open the box, but she grew curious and tilted the lid a little. Out flew

the blessings, one after another—all except Hope, which remained as a comfort to man.

Another story says that the giant had in his house a jar filled with evil things—sickness and plagues, envy, spite and revenge. These were left after birds, beasts and man had been made.

Pandora was warned not to touch the jar, and for a time she obeyed the warning. Then a day came when curiosity got the better of her. She tip-toed to the jar, and lifted the lid. Out flew the evil things, the troubles which have since made the world unhappy. Only Hope (a good thing) was left when Pandora put the lid back on.

These stories sprang from the wish of the Greeks to explain why so many things were wrong with the world. For my part, I do not see why early people should have put so much blame on women—men are at least as much to blame for human ills.

THE NEW CUP-BEARER
You remember that the gods and goddesses of Mount Olympus often sipped of the delicious drink called nectar. Their enjoyment was made even greater by the fact that the nectar was passed around by Hebe, goddess of youth. Hebe was all that could be wished for in the way of freshness and beauty. The heavenly rulers smiled upon her as she came with pitcher and goblet and poured out the drink of drinks. She returned their smiles, her face beaming joyously.

Then, one day, nectar was no longer served by the lovely Hebe. Stories disagree as to the reason. One account says she was dismissed as the result of a fall while serving tion, Zeus decided to find a successor. Taking the form of an eagle he flew near the surface of the earth. Near the city of Troy, in Asia Minor, he caught sight of a handsome boy on a hillside.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, "what lad would make a splendid cup-bearer."

Down he swept, caught the youth in his talons, and carried him to Mount Olympus. The name of the new cup-bearer was Ganymede. He became a favorite with both gods and goddesses. One of our pictures shows him giving drink to an eagle. This eagle is not Zeus in disguise, but the bird which sometimes carried thunder-bolts for Zeus.

here is Zeus, in the form of an eagle, carrying Ganymede to heaven.

Down he swept, caught the youth in his talons, and carried him to Mount Olympus. The name of the new cup-bearer was Ganymede. He became a favorite with both gods and goddesses. One of our pictures shows him giving drink to an eagle. This eagle is not Zeus in disguise, but the bird which sometimes carried thunder-bolts for Zeus.

cano ashes. The Greeks did not know that. The facts about the earlier ages were hidden from them, and you remember that the first use of fire goes way back in history.

The Greeks, however, were active-minded people. They invented a story to explain how man got fire. This story was bound up with stories about the earliest men. One tale says people were living before Zeus became king of the gods. A better-known story says that men were created by two giants who had been friendly to the gods during the war. Let us hear that story.

Prometheus, a good-hearted giant, and his brother were told to create birds, beasts and men. Prometheus let his brother make the birds and beasts. The brother was a careless fellow. He gave away too many gifts to the beasts and birds—swiftness, wings, strength, boldness and so on.

"What have you left for man?" asked Prometheus.

"Why I've given away all the main things," returned the brother giant. "Something must be done," said Prometheus. "I'll try to get fire for him."

Zeus had forbidden fire to be taken from heaven. It was supposed to be sacred to the gods. The noble giant, however, was unwilling to let the man created from clay and water suffer because he was weak. So he went up to heaven and lighted a torch near the sun. Bringing the torch back to earth, he gave it to the first man.

For doing that, Prometheus was harshly punished. He was fastened to a great boulder near a mountain peak. A vulture came around each day and sank its beak cruelly into his flesh; but Prometheus bore his pain without anger. He knew he had done something fine for mankind.

PANDORA'S BOX
The Greeks said the first woman had been made in heaven. They spoke of her as Pandora, which means "all-gifted." When she was created each god gave her a different gift. Apollo gave her musical ability. Aphrodite gave her beauty, and from other gods she also received valuable things.

Pandora was sent to earth. Prometheus, the giant who had given fire to man, was bound on a mountain peak, but his brother received the first woman into his house.

The gods, says one Greek story, had given Pandora a box full of wedding presents. Each present was a blessing. Pandora was not supposed to open the box, but she grew curious and tilted the lid a little. Out flew

the blessings, one after another—all except Hope, which remained as a comfort to man.

She repeated those adjectives to memory. She said them like a prayer, but it was not a prayer of appeal. She was applying the inverse ratio to the power of mental suggestion. She was striving by constant reminder to cast out from herself those very qualities.

It was very, very difficult, and yet, after the first wrench of disowning characteristics of which one has been rather proud, she was amused by the game.

For instance, when it was her instinct to make her own arrangements for railroad transportation from place to place, employing her more-than-ordinarily good Italian, and dispoing of her luggage in brisk, business-like fashion, she would stop and remind herself that this was not the way Jeannette Amory would act.

Before she had finished with her imitation of Mrs. Amory, she would have the undivided attention of several high-up railroad officials, too exalted to come forth from their offices as a general rule. She would have traveling citizens actively yearning to assist beauty in distress or, at least, in indecision. Porters and cabmen and train guards would be vying for the chance to serve "la bella signorina," and when finally she got away, looking forlorn and helpless in a forest of luggage, she left a trail of susceptible hearts cherishing her sweet, naive, appealing smile.

With the fading of the smile, she generally said: "Imbeciles!" to herself, but there was no denying her sense of humor.

She found herself, so conscientiously did she practice against being better perfect on her return to America, even directing that appealing smile toward matrons d'hotel, lifting troubled questioning eyes from queer foreign names on bill of fares, and letting herself be ordered for in crisp Italian that was almost as familiar to her ears as English. She managed to drop handkerchiefs, fragile and fragrant, jewelled vanity cases, pretty feminine useless handbags, whenever she sat on the terrace, and rewarded the dark-eyed gallants who eagerly retrieved them with that sweet, wavering smile, which intrigued, when it somehow kept them at an admiring distance.

She had difficulty in opening her sunshade at times and accepted assistance shyly. She let herself be tucked about with rugs when she motored, though she fairly sweltered in the Spring sunshine. A perfect swimmer, she even allowed herself to be rescued from apparent drowning, and posed as an interesting invalid for days thereafter, lying in a chaise longue on the terrace, surrounded by flowers sent by anxious acquaintances. Her rescuer, a slim, good-looking young Italian, called every afternoon to make anxious inquiry about her progress, and she gave him tea prettily and questioned him naively about himself. He was scarcely older than she, but she deferred to him conversationally, fairly hung upon his answers, professed childish innocence and naivete.

She felt, that night on the terrace while she sipped her coffee, that she was ready to try her artistry on bigger game.

Love Stakes

By MILDRED BARBOUR

"And yet you have done everything in your power to hurt me," she reminded him.

"No," he shook his head sadly, "not deliberately. I selfishly tried to free myself from further hurt and I brought down several innocent people in my struggle."

"Innocent?" Natalie looked up at him eagerly. "You mean—"

Was he going to speak of Barry?

PUZZLING MOTIVES

To Natalie's disappointment, Robert Amory deftly changed the subject without explaining what he had meant by his reference to "innocent people."

How much, she wondered, did he suspect of the real state of affairs. "Was not a man easily fooled, yet might deliberately have pretended a mistaken identity if it suited his own ends."

Ah, well, it was over now, she reflected. She had vowed not to let her thoughts dwell upon the past, but to raise her eyes to the promise of the future. Her real fight was still before her, the fight that would win Barry's love from Jeannette Amory, or lose it forever.

"Shall you be in Italy long?" Amory asked after awhile.

"For a few months. Until it's late Spring at home. I adore Springtime in Italy, especially in Naples."

"I shall be coming back by way of Naples," said Amory. "Will it be permissible to look you up there?" She shrugged smilingly.

"Why not? We seem to have declared a truce."

He too smiled a little grimly.

"Rather amusing situation this! I divorce my wife because of your husband," he seemed impervious to her wince; "a few months later finds you and me enjoying a truce in Italy, the land of perpetual romance, while my former wife and your husband keep the hearthfire burning at home."

He looked at her sharply, so sharply that she lowered her eyes lest he read her thoughts.

"Yes, you have courage. You're willing to risk absence, the propinquity of two people who have just gone through the mill, who, sore and bruised, and shunned perhaps by their fellowmen, have only each other for consolation."

He was as ruthless as a surgeon with a knife. It seemed as though he deliberately sought the spot that would hurt her most. She could discern no humane motive underlying his cruelty. She hated him. All her being cried out in the impulse to strike that maliciously smiling mouth.

But she was too proud to let him see how he hurt her. If she showed neither anger nor resentment, he would soon cease to find it amusing to launch his barbed shafts.

So she shrugged and said lightly, "I take it then, that you're not a gambler, Mr. Amory?"

"Not when the human heart is concerned. Experience has taught me that the dice are loaded."

"Don't you sometimes do a little bit of loading of the dice yourself?" she asked audaciously.

"You read me perfectly, Mrs. Sheldon," he laughed. "I am only now waiting for the opportunity."

Long after she had gone to her state-room and endeavored to read herself to sleep, that last statement of his, delivered with a significance that blotted out his light irony, recurred to her.

Had it meant anything, or was it just an idle bit of repartee?

One interruption occurred to her which made her face flame in the dark. Had he in mind a flirtation with her as a crude means of revenge, for had she not treated him with magnanimity under similar circumstances?

She smiled ruefully into the darkness. If he only knew of how little moment a love affair of hers would be to Barry. Barry's pride might be hurt, but his heart wasn't here to wound. He couldn't even rightfully resent his wife's interest in someone else, for had she not treated him with magnanimity under similar circumstances?

It was this last fact which made Natalie regret a little the necessity which her plans for the future forced upon her. It wasn't going to be quite sporting, not quite the sort of thing the old Natalie would have done. But circumstances alter cases, and necessity must need be its own excuse.

She didn't see Robert Amory again

THE NEW NATALIE

Springtime in Naples!
Natalie sat on the terrace of the hotel, overlooking the dark, warm, fragrant Italian garden. A silver plaque of a moon rose in a velvety midnight-blue sky and dispelled the brilliance of the stars that powdered it. Down in the perfumed shadows of the garden, a street singer touched a guitar and sang softly an air from "Boheme."

Natalie sipped her after-dinner coffee, eyes drinking in the languorous beauty of the night. She was quite oblivious to other eyes—mascu-line eyes, that watched appreciatively, noting with a connoisseur's accuracy the sheen of the fair hair in the path of light from the opened windows, the gleam of white shoulders above a low-cut gown, the perfect lines of slim young body.

And yet she was strangely, thrillingly aware of some inexplicable excitement that stirred her blood and made her breath come faster. It was as though something of tremendous significance was about to occur.

She laughed a little at herself and beckoned the hovering waiter to refill her cup.

"Better come down to earth, my dear," she advised herself. "No time for romantic dreams with a you have to do before you. You can't let Naples and Springtime win you away from a fixed purpose. You have very little time left. Pretty soon, you'll have to be going back, and unless you've got accustomed to your new role, it's going to slip somewhere and show the real you underneath."

Long ago, when she had resolved to rout Jeannette Amory with her own weapons, at her own game, she had taken stock of the other woman and herself. She had lined the two of them up alongside in her mind, and painstakingly noted the difference.

Jeannette appealed to Barry—he had admitted it. She appealed because she was frail, helpless, clinging, unctious, and ceaselessly adoring. This latter Natalie suspected. Barry hadn't told her.

Natalie remembered the adjectives Barry had always used in characterizing her. He had called her beautiful, of course. But, she recalled, he had used so frequently the words before she left the ship, for which she was thankful.

It was good to be in Italy with its blue skies and sparkling sea and riotous flowers. She delved deep into its healing supphine and felt her bruised, tired spirit responding. She came and went at will, secure in the knowledge that no gossip, no publicity clung to her here. The attention she created was a tribute to her loveliness, not to the unwholesome reflex from an unsavory divorce suit. In Naples, she first felt the thrilling sense of approaching adventure.

She was very, very difficult, and yet, after the first wrench of disowning characteristics of which one has been rather proud, she was amused by the game.

For instance, when it was her instinct to make her own arrangements for railroad transportation from place to place, employing her more-than-ordinarily good Italian, and dispoing of her luggage in brisk, business-like fashion, she would stop and remind herself that this was not the way Jeannette Amory would act.

conjecture as to its bearing on American policy in this hemisphere. President Coolidge has shown his hand by his direct participation in the expert examination of the German financial position by a committee appointed under the auspices of the Reparations Commission. His action is emphasized by the fact not only that General Dawes, the chairman of this committee, is an American, but by the circumstance that he has been chosen by the Republican convention to run with President Coolidge, at the election, as his second in command.

It commits the Republican party to a policy of making good the Dawes recommendations. It is as complete an abandonment of the policy of non-intervention in European troubles as was President Wilson's declaration of war in 1917. It brings America definitely back into the European arena. To us on this side of the Atlantic, it looks like a complete reversal of the policy of isolation and repudiation, so loudly proclaimed by M. Hiram Johnson.

The old policy at international conferences, since the Senate blocked the treaty of 1919, was to send some American official to occupy a stage box during the performance, and write letters home about the play. This has now entirely gone. America is herself playing a great part in the next important act in the drama. What is more, she is settling to take her share in the cost of running the show.

CONSIDERS LA FOLLETTE FAVORABLE
It is true there is no room on the Republican platform for the League of Nations. The covenant is as emphatically disowned and denounced as it ever was. But what matters most for Europe is that America should re-cross the Atlantic, after her disastrous absence of years from the republic of the world. This assured, whether Republican or Democratic candidate be returned.

As to Mr. La Follette's views on the subject, I have no information. But judging by the constituency to which he specially appeals and which constitutes his main strength, I should expect to find him an advocate of any proposition which would conduce to European settlement. I met a number of his supporters in the farming communities of the Middle West. They complained of the serious effect which disturbances in Europe were having on the markets for their produce. Germany, who was formerly a large purchaser of Minneapolis and Chicago products, was no longer able to buy. Any scheme, therefore, which will result in restoring the purchasing capacity of Middle Europe must appeal to the cultivators of the Middle West. I shall therefore be surprised if Mr. La Follette does not commit himself to the carrying out of the Dawes report in letter and spirit.

DAVIS MUCH ADMIRER
As to the Democratic candidate, he never was a non-interventionist. His position as Ambassador to the Court of St. James from 1919 to 1921 has made him a well-known figure in Western Europe. He followed one of the ablest and most popular ambassadors the United States ever sent to Britain—the late Mr. Walter Hines Page. But that exceptional popularity was maintained by Mr. Davis. His engaging personality, his tact and judgment and his remarkable gifts of speech, made for him a host of admirers and friends on this side of the Atlantic, and the contest will be watched with all the more personal interest because he is one of the champions in the ring.

But as far as the programme of his party on foreign policy is concerned, there is only one aspect which would lead one to expect any further advance in the direction of intervention, beyond that indicated in the Republican programme.

WHERE BOTH PARTIES STAND

Both parties promise to take steps to summon an international conference with a view to inducing the nations to reduce their land armaments. If this conference is as successful as the Washington Conference on naval armaments, the burdened and threatened nations will have cause to rejoice. The more marked difference in the attitude of the two great parties on foreign affairs appears in their treatment of the League of Nations. The covenant is more respectfully and sympathetically spoken of by the Democrats than by the Republicans. That was to be expected. But the promise of a referendum on the whole question might, if it fruited, end in bringing America into an amended League. That would profoundly affect world politics by giving new life and prestige to the League.

On the whole, the impression of an outside observer is that one party feels that it has gone further in the direction of isolation than public opinion is now prepared to support it, and that the other party realizes that it went further in the direction of intervention than America's opinion was prepared to go, but that, whatever party wins, America means to have a decisive say in world affairs.

As the campaign develops, difference of attitude on foreign questions may become more definite and challenging. The strength of the Wilsonian and anti-Wilsonian traditions may manifest themselves in marked divergences of policy. For the moment, these are not clear at this distance from the scene of action. But, whatever happens, it is inconceivable that America, having come in decisively, can possibly quit without seeing the Dawes report right through. General Dawes commits one party.

President Wilson commits the other. But we shall await developments with interest not unmixed with anxiety.

MORE THAN MERE PERSONAL SPLIT

There is another circumstance in the coming Presidential struggle which is lending special interest to it. It is the first occasion in which a new party has appeared in the arena with a following sufficiently powerful to introduce an element of Appreciating the fact that so many men who are not employees of the collieries have expressed a desire to become members of the club, the board, at a recent meeting, passed a resolution that these men could become associate members with certain restrictions, namely, that no associate member shall hold office, or be appointed on any committee, or have a vote in any of the business transactions of the association, and that the membership fee will be $4 for every three months payable in advance. The membership fee is only $3 more than that paid by the regular members a year.

CHARGES CHIEF OF POLICE WITH SPITE AND GETS HEARING

Owen Lloyd, Dairyman, Makes Charge to Saanich Council

Owen Lloyd, a dairyman of Saanich, last night waited upon the Saanich Council with a complaint in connection with fines imposed for the infringement of the Pound Act and alleged spite action on the part of Chief of Police Brogan. In the first place, he asserted, his herd of thirty-six cows was impounded in the municipal pound quarters, where the cattle suffered serious injury on account of improper housing and attention, when there were only six cows on the public highway at the time the police took charge of the herd.

The council heard the complaint of Mr. Lloyd and read the letter written to them by him, which was in part, as follows:—
"About noon on February 16 last six of thirty-six cows of mine broke out of my pasture on a subdivision and were being taken to the pound at Royal Oak, though I was away at the time, and one of my men, period Chief Brogan and Sergeant Rankin on the road and asked for their release. He was refused. On other occasions the police had not refused to give back cattle."
At this juncture Mr. Lloyd stated, on permission of the council, that Chief Brogan had threatened to make things uncomfortable for him.
He continued to explain that he had been unable to pay the fine imposed upon him following the impounding of his cows, but had offered to give a post-dated cheque to the police authorities. The sheriff, however, on a distress warrant had occupied his property, said Mr. Lloyd, and was there at the moment.

QUICK ACTION

The council deliberated before hearing the statement further, and then decided to dispose of the matter at once. Having full details and with Council-er Vantreigh urging that Mr. Lloyd's request be given consideration, as the load borne by farmers was already most oppressive, the Council decided to accept a post-dated cheque in payment of the $50 fine, and Municipal Clerk Sewell called the cheque from Mr. Lloyd's property by telephone, on the order of the council.

Mr. Lloyd will go before the Board of Police Commissioners at their next session and make certain grave charges, he asserts.

During the course of the discussion Councillor Vantreigh said: "I might say something in this connection if I wished, but I won't say anything just now."

The fine of $50 imposed upon Mr. Lloyd in the police court, in addition to the pound fees of $90, Mr. Lloyd originally planned to take legal action against the council, but on the advice of his lawyer, H. A. Maclean, K.C., decided not to do so.

Councillor Hagen evinced interest in the case and asked:

"Have you good pasturage for your cows?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Lloyd.

"How did your cows get out on the road?" inquired the councillor.

"They broke through the fence," was the reply.

"Are you in the habit of allowing your cows on the roads?" Councillor Vantreigh wished to know.

"No," said Mr. Lloyd, "they graze on a subdivision and are always herded."

"You are aware," asked Councillor Kirkham, "that there are letters on our files complaining of damage done by your cows to property?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Lloyd.

The council decided by a unanimous vote to accept a cheque for the fine post-dated for August 2. The matter will rest until the police commissioners hold session in the near future.

FEWER MENTALLY DEFICIENT PUPILS

School Medical Officer's Report at Variance With Women's Claims

Mental deficiency is decreasing among the pupils of the public schools of the city, and of thirty-five pupils attending special classes only eight can be classified as mentally deficient, says Dr. David Donald, school medical officer, in his annual report just issued. Under the heading of "Mentally Deficient," Dr. Donald answers criticisms by the Local Council of Women during its fight for a change in the Juvenile Court system.

"I reported eleven cases last year," he says, "but this number is reduced to eight. No new cases have been discovered, and three of the old cases are struck off."

"One child has left the city, one so-called mentally deficient boy who exhibited excellent artistic ability has been engaged to work for a well-known art-designing firm, the other boy is employed in a motor garage, where doubtless he will be an authority on motor car problems. It is surely no flight of fancy to anticipate that these two lads may, in the battle of life, soon be more successful financially than many a clever student who acquires a university degree."

"In our city schools there are two special classes for children who are a problem to their teachers in the ordinary classes. Because of certain factors they have not been able to keep pace with their comrades in the educational 'grind.'"

"At present there are some thirty-five pupils divided almost equally between the two special classes. A large number of these pupils will leave next term to take their places in the ordinary school classes, and they will be replaced by some others who have been selected by the various principals as requiring special training."

"I think if at all possible another class of this description might be started, as I am convinced that sufficient pupils from the ordinary classes are found who will benefit by special training."

"Of the thirty-five pupils at present in these classes, eight are mentally deficient, and of these only three or four are making poor progress."

FREE MILK ISSUE HELPS CHILDREN

Has Aided in Cases of Malnutrition, School Health Officer Reports

The free milk issue in the public schools of Victoria has helped in the cases of malnutrition, and a second examination of a number of underweight children has shown that the milk issue, and the fact that the mothers have carried out his instructions regarding diet has resulted in them putting on weight, Dr. David Donald, Schools Health Officer, reports.

During the year Dr. Donald examined and compiled reports on 2,534 pupils, and 226 clinical cases were handled. Disability statistics compiled are as follows:

Malnutrition, 2; mentally defective, 8; defective vision, 239; defective hearing, 6; defective breathing, 5; adenoids, 2; enlarged tonsils, 98; enlarged glands, 4; goitre, 1; cardiac conditions, 21; deformities, 29; infantile paralysis, 4; rickets, 1; impediment of speech, 2; dwarf, 1; nervous conditions, 10; chest conditions, 5.

"That no case of active tuberculosis has been found in such a large number of pupils is a matter of special interest and should go far to enhance the reputation of Victoria as a health resort," declares the report.

Concerning defective vision, Dr. Donald said that the situation had much improved, but regretted that there were still a number of children suffering from the disability owing to their parents not being able to secure glasses. He hoped to find a way of overcoming this difficulty.

"No serious case of defective hearing was found, most of them resulting from colds or infectious diseases. A great improvement in the matter of enlarged tonsils was also reported.

GIRLS HELPED BY PHYSICAL TRAINING

Schools Medical Health Officer Reports on Result of Exercises

Forty girls with poor chest development attending the Victoria High School, at the end of a course of in some cases one month and other cases two, averaged an increased measurement of nearly one and a half inches, Dr. David Donald, School Medical Health Officer, states in his annual report. Dr. Donald speaks enthusiastically of the advantages of physical training, and suggests a meeting of the principals to discuss it. Speaking of the breathing exercises which caused the noteworthy chest expansion, he says:

"No other form of exercise could, in such a short time, have brought about such a beneficial result, especially when one considers that well-developed lungs are the best protection against so many chest diseases. The same experiment has been tried also in the graded schools, and while the results are satisfactory the figures are not startling."

The principal of Oaklands School, Mr. McInnes, enthusiastically entered into the matter and has sent me a report of a month's trial. While a few cases had marked improvement, the report rather disappointed me till I remembered that the Oaklands School is specially noted for well-developed children. Mr. Campbell, principal of North Ward, also submitted a report showing an improvement in some cases."

"The electric light and power circuits and the telephones will be connected up immediately. In the telephone conduits are wires which are designed to carry radio concerts to the patients in the public wards. A lady donor, who chooses to remain anonymous, has sponsored the installation of a radio set which will bring music from the air to the ears of all patients in public wards. Those in private wards can arrange for their own service."

Progress was reported all along the line by the building committee. The contractors are now busy enameling the ceilings of the operating rooms, and in putting final touches to various parts of the building. The delay in the delivery of apparatus has stayed the hands of the contractors more than was expected, so that some portion of the work hangs fire.

Alderman Harvey, city's representative, and H. H. Shandley, Government appointee to the board, were welcomed last night. Both will act on the purchasing committee, one of the most important bodies this year, Alderman Harvey also joins the finance committee.

The purchasing committee under Mark W. Graham will meet early next week to settle important details in connection with the work. Standing committees remain unchanged. Alex. Stewart headed the building committee and James Forman the finance committee in the year completed, and will likely be re-elected by their committees to carry on the work of the year to come.

PRESIDENT REELECTED
The meeting re-elected George McGregor by acclamation as president; Charles Williams, as vice-president; L. U. Conyers, hon. treasurer.

BIM GUMP

THAT'S ALL THE STORIES I'M GOING TO TELL YOU ABOUT AUSTRALIA TONIGHT- YOU SHOULD HAVE BEEN IN BED AN HOUR AGO- I'LL TELL YOU SOME MORE STORIES TOMORROW NIGHT IF YOU ARE A GOOD BOY-

OH GEE, PAPA- I'M NOT SLEEPY AND I LOVE TO HEAR ABOUT THE FUNNY KANGAROOS AND BUSH WHACKERS AND EVERYTHING-

NOW COME ON AND MAMA WILL PUT YOU TO BED- IF YOU DON'T HURRY YOU'LL MISS THE TRAIN TO SLUMBERLAND-

PAPA SAYS IN AUSTRALIA YOU CAN FIND LUMPS OF GOLD AS BIG AS PUMPKINS- AND THAT EVERYBODY IS RICH AND HAPPY AND THAT I'M GOING TO BE THE RICHEST BOY IN ALL THE WHOLE WORLD-

YOU LITTLE DARLING-

WHEN I GET TO UNCLE BIM'S HOUSE I'LL ASK HIM TO SHOW ME WHERE TO FIND THE LUMPS OF GOLD AND THEN I'LL GET A GREAT BIG BAG AND I'LL FILL IT FULL OF GOLD AND I'LL SEND IT TO YOU AND PAPA- AND THEN YOU CAN BUY AUTOMOBILES AND A MILLION DRESSES AND LOTS OF CANDY AND ANYTHING YOU WANT- I'LL BE RICH AND HAVE A THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS-

WHEN I THINK OF PARTING WITH OUR LITTLE CHESTER- IT JUST BREAKS MY HEART- I KNOW I'LL DIE OF LONESOMENESS-

DON'T BE SILLY- IT'S THE BEST THING IN THE WORLD FOR HIM- YOU SHOULD BE TICKLED PINK TO KNOW THE BOY HAS SUCH A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY-

IT'S EASY TO TALK ABOUT HIS GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY BUT SUPPOSE SOMETHING HAPPENED TO HIM- I COULD NEVER FORGIVE MYSELF-

NOTHING CAN HAPPEN TO HIM- HE WILL BE GUARDED LIKE THE CROWN JEWELS- HIS EVERY WISH WILL BE GRATIFIED- UNCLE BIM WILL SEE THAT EVERY HOUR SPELLS SIXTY MINUTES OF HAPPINESS FOR CHESTER- I WISH I HAD HAD HIS CHANCE WHEN I WAS A BOY-

I DON'T CARE WHAT YOU SAY- I'LL NEVER HAVE A MOMENT'S PEACE WHILE HE IS AWAY- IT'S EASY TO SEE YOU DON'T LOVE HIM LIKE I DO-

I LOVE HIM MORE THAN ANYTHING IN THE WORLD- THAT'S WHY I AM SO HAPPY TO SEE HIM START ON THE ROAD TO SUCCESS- MY LOVE IS BIG AND BROAD ENOUGH TO MAKE ME FEEL GLAD TO KNOW THAT MY BOY WILL HAVE EVERYTHING HIS HEART CAN DESIRE-

BUT CHESTER IS SO SMALL AND AUSTRALIA IS SO BIG AND SO FAR AWAY- I DON'T SEE HOW YOU, WHO PRETEND TO LOVE HIM, CAN BEAR TO SEE HIM GO-

I'M PROUD TO SEE HIM GO- UNCLE BIM WILL MAKE HIM THE RICHEST MAN IN THE WORLD- IF I DEPRIVED HIM OF THIS PRICELESS OPPORTUNITY THE BOY WOULD HATE ME WHEN HE GREW UP FOR ROBBING HIM OF HIS GREAT FORTUNE-

WELL, IF ANYTHING HAPPENS TO HIM IT WILL BE YOUR FAULT- IT WAS YOU WHO DROVE THE POOR, HELPLESS LITTLE LAD OUT INTO THE CRUEL WORLD-

LISTEN, MIN- RIGHT IS RIGHT- LITTLE CHESTER HAS FOUND ALADDIN'S LAMP AND YOU WANT ME TO KICK IT OUT OF HIS HANDS BEFORE HE HAS A CHANCE TO RUB IT- YOU SHOULD BE THE HAPPIEST MOTHER IN THE WORLD TO THINK YOUR SON HAS SUCH GOOD LUCK-

WELL, I DON'T FEEL HAPPY- THE MORE I THINK OF IT THE MORE MISERABLE I BECOME- I LOVE HIM AND I WANT TO KEEP HIM WHERE HE IS SAFE-

THE WAY YOU TALK YOU'D THINK HE WAS GOING TO A POOR-HOUSE INSTEAD OF A PALACE- THERE ISN'T A BOY IN THE WORLD WHO WOULDN'T ENVY HIM- YOU'RE CRYING BECAUSE YOUR SON IS GOING TO VISIT HIS UNCLE BIM WHO WILL GUARD HIM AND GIVE HIM EVERYTHING IN THE WORLD-

I CAN'T HELP FEELING BLUE- I KNOW HOW MY HEART WILL ACHIE WHEN I HAVE TO SAY GOODBYE TO HIM-

WHEN HE STARTS TO CLIMB INTO THE LAP OF LUXURY I'LL BE AS HAPPY AS A FLOCK OF LARKS- I HAVE TO LAUGH EVERYTIME I THINK OF MY BOY'S GOOD FORTUNE- YOU WON'T SEE ME SHEDDING ANY TEARS- I'LL BE TOO BUSY REJOICING OVER HIS SUCCESS-

SEE THE LITTLE DARLING- LOOK AT HIM BREATHE- SEE HOW HE SMILES IN HIS SLEEP- AND THINK OF MY LITTLE BABY GOING THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS OF MILES AWAY FROM US- JUST IMAGINE HIM SICK- DELIRIOUS WITH FEVER CRYING OUT FOR HIS PAPA AND MAMA WHILE WE ARE ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE WORLD- HE WOULD BE DEAD BEFORE WE REACHED HIM-

AND THINK OF THE DANGERS HE MUST GO THROUGH TO REACH UNCLE BIM- HE MIGHT GET LOST OR A KIDNAPPER MIGHT STEAL HIM- HIS TRAIN MIGHT GET WRECKED OR THE SHIP MIGHT SINK!
